As Hiram Sees It

A movement to have a monument erected above the grave of Robert Foulis, inventor of the steam fog-horn system, was started in Saint John yesterday, it is understood. Robert Foulis is buried in the family lot in Fernhill Cemetery, but there is no monument to mark his grave.

Further information concerning him was obtained yesterday when attention was drawn to the fact that his second wife is living in the city and here. Miss Foulis has attained considerable renown as a painter, having inherited her father's talent in this regard.

Mr. Foulis was a member of St. Andrew's Society in Saint John, having Andrew's Society in Saint John, having joined that body in 1822.

One citizen yesterday in speaking to The Times-Star expressed the opinion that the Foulis residence had pinion that the Foulis residence had michi—an' went down Maine way to the street the siege was an' when he got there the siege was nearly over.
