WOMEN'S SURVEY SHOWS WORK IS PITFALL TO LOVE

Listed as Chief Cause of Unhappiness by Those Engaged in Occupations Outside of Their Homes.

(New York Tribune)
There is discouragement for the busy women in the findings of the Bureau of Social Hygiene, which recently interrogated 1,000 women, chiefly college graduates, on intimate questions of love and marital happiness. It was found that "unhappiness" was most often listed where married women were engaged in occupations outside the home.

Of 369 women who were teachers before marriage, 24.9 per cent. continued or returned to their vocation after marriage. Of this number 26 per cent. described themselves as unhappily married. Among twenty-five women who filled in the questionnaire, 92.8 per cent. practiced medicine after marriage and 20.8 per cent. were acutely unhappy, chiefly because of their inability to adjust their work to the demands of married life.

The leading reason given for unhappiness in married life was incompatibility of temperament or interest. At this came the following causes: Difficulties of adjustment, economic reasons, unfaithfulness, alcoholism, lack of children, insufficient love, violent and uncontrolled temper, religious differences, disparity in age, "too much mother-in-law," ill health, cruelty, too many children and drug addiction.

Many Disparities in Age.

Only three mentioned disparity in age, yet a comparison of the ages of husband and wife in individual questionnaires revealed a considerable number of cases where the difference was marked. Fourteen women said they were unhappy from economic reasons although 228 owned up to contributing to the family budget by work outside their homes. The average age of the women who said they were happy proved to be thirty-seven years and of those who were miserable forty-two.

Five hundred answers have reached the bureau so far from the unmarried women, who received a slightly less searching questionnaire. The finished analysis will be published in "The Journal of Social Hygiene" when the returns are in, but a preliminary study has been made of the first 500 to answer. The youngest was twenty-two and the oldest sixty-six years.

Out of 200 single women, 32 confessed to being unhappy, 87 to finding their life as a whole unsatisfactory and 16 to being unsuccessful. The chief cause of unhappiness is summed up as "too much routine" no chance for complete self-expression.

The chief interests outside their occupations were listed in the following sequence: Outdoor sports, reading, music, social contacts, family, church and religion, social betterment or philanthropy, theatre and travel. At the very end of the list came housekeeping, for which only 15 out of 500 appeared to have any liking.

The women questioned included 883 teachers, 30 social service workers, 38 librarians, 32 secretaries and 16 girls engaged in administrative work.

Twenty-four per cent. have had nervous breakdowns and an additional forty-three women admitted that they came near to this form of collapse. Other questions asked were: Have you lost time from school or work because of ill-health? Are you inclined to worry? Is your present occupation absorbing and satisfactory? Particulars of ill-health? Under the heading of "worry," 38 per cent. answered unqualifiedly in the affirmative. Fifteen per cent. said they worried a little and 51 per cent. said they worried not at all. A formidable list of 207 academic degrees goes with the names of the 500 unwed women questioned.

"We've only scratched the surface so far," said Dr. Catherine Bement Davis yesterday. "We intend to carry this much further. The need for more adequate data as to both the physical and the mental facts of the sex life of the normal individual is now generally recognized by psychologists, psychiatrists and students among medical practitioners, as well as by those whose interests lie in the practical fields of social hygiene. We expect teachers, parents and educators to use the data we collect. In course of time we will send similar questionnaires to college men."

On the co-operating committee on inquiry, in addition to Dr. Davis, are: Mrs. Elmer Blair, of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Martha P. Falconer, of the American Social Hygiene Association; Mrs. Edith Houghton Hooker, of Baltimore; Dr. Susan Kingsbury, of Bryn Mawr; Dr. Elizabeth Spencer McCall, of Bryn Mawr; Dr. Valeria H. Parker, of the Women's Christian Temperance Union; Dr. Ellen C. Potter, Department of Public Welfare, Pennsylvania; Dr. Edith Hale Swift, American Social Hygiene Association; Dr. Jessie Taft, of Philadelphia, and Dr. Helen Thompson Woolley, of Detroit.

BRINGS IN SNAKE BRACELET.

Woman is Not Stopped When Custom Agent Recognizes Trinket.

New York, April 12.—When a customs agent started to examine the baggage of Miss Mary Lewis of Pompton Lakes, N. J., a passenger on the Grace liner Santa Luisa docking from Valparaiso, he noted what appeared to be a necklace of coral beads on her wrist. His move to examine it was met by a counter move of the "bracelet," and he jumped back several feet.

"Don't be afraid," Miss Lewis said. "It's Rodolphe my pet coral snake."

Rodolphe entered duty free. The snake, a delicate pink, was about three feet long. While coral snakes are said to be poisonous, Miss Lewis affirmed that Rodolphe was lacking in such qualities. She said she would train the pet to replace a watchdog which had died.

Baltimore Passes Boston Population

Several U. S. Cities Have Displaced Big Rivals

Washington, April 12.—Several changes in the relative size of the larger United States cities are indicated by new census bureau figures prepared on the assumption that growth conditions prevailing in 1920 in the various localities are continuing.

The new estimates show that eight of the fifty largest municipalities have replaced their nearest rivals and that two have been shoved out of the fifty largest class. New York is shown to be approaching closely the 5,000,000 mark; Chicago is not far from the 4,000,000 mark; Philadelphia is nearing 2,000,000, and Detroit is near to 1,000,000. There have been no changes in the rank of the first six largest cities.

Baltimore has gone ahead of Boston, and now ranks as the seventh largest city of the country. Los Angeles has passed Pittsburgh, and taken ninth rank. San Francisco has grown larger than Buffalo, and goes into eleventh place. Minneapolis has outgrown two cities, Cincinnati and New Orleans, and now is sixteenth.

WOMAN SHOT AS GUN FALLS.

Heel Blown Off As She Hits Weapon With Mop.

New York, April 12.—Narrowly escaping death, Mrs. Sophia Feuss of Yonkers, had her left heel blown off by upsetting a loaded shotgun and exploding the cartridge while mopping the floor in her home.

The shotgun, which was kept loaded, belonged to her husband, who runs a store on the floor below. The store was robbed some time ago and Feuss kept the shotgun loaded to be prepared to give battle to burglars if they appeared again. Mrs. Feuss accidentally struck the gun and toppled it over. It went off with a loud explosion and she fainted. She was found with a portion of her left heel shot away. The wall was riddled with gunshot. Dr. Muligan of St. Joseph's Hospital treated her there.

TOO MANY THRILLS FOR CHILDREN

(London Daily Mail)

Twenty years ago the commonest type of patient among children usually suffered from some organic disease, such as bronchitis, dyspepsia, measles, scarlet fever, and the like. But nowadays the majority of young patients in any doctor's consulting-room are the victims of nervous disorders of a functional nature.

These ailments are due not to the invasion of the body of microbes or to any visible change in the internal organs, but to a want of balance or control of the nervous system. Diseases such as St. Vitus' dance, hysteria and epilepsy are far commoner among children than they used to be, and far commoner than they ought to be.

In a minor form, mental instability is seen in such prevalent disorders as sleeplessness, night-terrors, stammering, restlessness and violent outbursts of temper.

Children born within the past eight years have been conceived and nurtured in the midst of great emotional strain and excitement on the part of their parents. To many a young child there has been bequeathed thereby an inheritance of nervous instability, the result of parents at a loss to understand.

Their ignorance and consequent neglect of this disability are laying the foundation of numerous functional disorders that will make for much misery and ill-health in the future.

The "Children's Age," with all that it implies, is a potent factor in the production of nervous disorders among present-day children.

The greater attention paid to individuality tends to foster a precocious egotism. At the same time, the growing child cannot but be infected with the restless, pleasure-seeking spirit of its age.

The result is that the plastic and impressionable brain is over-stimulated. While a visit to a circus or a pantomime used to be an event to be remembered and discussed for months afterwards, to the blasé child today it brings only the mildest of thrills. He gets too many thrills.

No cause without its effect. Sooner or later the over-taxed brain can stand no more, and the unhappy child develops disorders that attack the over-wrought nervous system.

THE BLACK HAND IN ONTARIO

Head of Provincial Police Tells of Activities.

Toronto, April 12.—In the annual report of the provincial police department tabled in the Legislature (General V. A. S. Williams, commissioner of police, declares that during the last year there have been conclusive signs that Black Hand organizations of foreign countries have extended their activities to Canada. It is safe to assert, says General Williams, that along the Niagara border there are secret organizations of foreign origin which strive for objects which are not in keeping

THE TOWN THAT FORGOT GOD

(London Daily Mail)

There have been murders in Lewiston, Beverly Swamp, Niagara Falls, the Welland Canal, Brantford and Oakville, all in the district in which the commissioner believes the Black Hand exists, and the murders cannot be separated from the secret societies. He suggests that foreigners be compelled to carry registration cards which would not only serve as identification cards but also carry a record of behavior. The strength of the provincial police is 184. The criminal figures given show sixteen cases of murder; 538 O. T. A. cases, and others. The revenue from fines was $638,468, and the cost of maintenance of the force $689,884.

Mr. Brown said that the new station would not be erected this year but would be considered in the near future. Mr. Brown will leave here this afternoon for Prince Edward Island in connection with a proposal to make some of the tracks there standard gauge.
