THE BIRTH.

A Little Child's Birth. God, makes my life a little light, Within the world to glow.

God, makes my life a little flower, That giveth joy to all, Content to bloom in native bower.

God, makes my life a little hymn, Of undertones and praise, Most assuredly not in vain.

For His sake. Nine o'clock on Saturday morning, and Hettie still standing by the stove baking cakes.

For whom was she baking cakes at such a late hour? The family breakfast had been eaten and cleared away a full hour and a half ago.

Hettie was baking cakes for Brother Rob, who at that moment was sitting in the dining-room, leaning back in his breakfast-cakes and maple syrup, regardless of what the clock said.

Rob was nineteen, four years older than Hettie, and considered it his privilege to tease his sister and lord it over her generally.

On this particular morning Rob had been more exasperating than usual. He said the cakes were burnt, that they were raw, and he asked Hettie if she had to wait to have some flour ground before she brought any more.

Besides all this it was a warm morning, and Hettie was sick, and she looked at her face as she drew into a scowl, and she frowned deeper with each cake turned? I don't think she tried very hard.

Rob says he wants a glass of water. The small messenger who said this was the baby and pet of the house.

Lillie watched her sister a moment as she jerked the pump handle up and down, and then with a puzzled look asked: "Hettie, are you sure you're not done as yet?"

"For his sake! What do you mean? Whose sake?" "Why, for Jesus' sake, I guess. It is in my Sunday-school lesson for to-morrow about getting a cup of water for Him."

"The fire wasn't burning nicely; it is all right now," she said meekly. Amusement showed in every line of Rob's face as he saw the tempting cakes and heard the gentle reply.

"The next evening as she was starting for church, she lingered in the hall a moment when Rob was putting on his overcoat preparatory to going, she did not know where, for it was not his habit to attend this meeting.

"Rob" said she half timidly, "I wish you would go to the young people's meeting with me tonight!"

"How do you know but I will?" "Oh! will you?" "I shouldn't wonder. You see, Hettie, somebody told me you look just in the meeting last week, and I've been watching you to see if it was all talk. Yesterday morning I made up my mind you had something you did, I have once something that helped you. I find it there, I wish you would go to the young people's meeting with me tonight!"

TEMPERANCE.

Well Done. A young man called, in company with several other gentlemen, upon a young lady. Her father was also present, to assist in entertaining the callers.

"I feel so sorry for rich people; they seem to have so much trouble." So said a poor girl who earns her living by her daily toil. She has trouble, too, but she hasn't time to worry about it.

Charles Dickens used to say that he judged the quality of housekeeping by the condition of the castors on the table. If the mustard was freshly made, the vinegar cruet stainless, the silver brilliant, and the pepper-box perpendicular, he expressed a high opinion of the housewife.

Rob was nineteen, four years older than Hettie, and considered it his privilege to tease his sister and lord it over her generally. Often would he come down-stairs late and demand his breakfast of Hettie in a tone of authority, as if of course it was the business of her life to wait upon him.

THE FARM.

CURE FOR A KICKING HORSE. Parties who are troubled with kicking horses may read the following with profit: An old west-sack with hay was suspended by a rope from the ceiling of a barn.

Rob was nineteen, four years older than Hettie, and considered it his privilege to tease his sister and lord it over her generally. Often would he come down-stairs late and demand his breakfast of Hettie in a tone of authority, as if of course it was the business of her life to wait upon him.
