unusual education and initiative. For the past few years she has seemed omnipresent in the bay state. One can find her everywhere. A Boston writer on route from Pittsburgh to Boston recently was surprised to hear "Votes for Women" called, and looking to the rear perceived Miss Carpenter advancing down the aisle distributing suffrage propaganda and bright smiles throughout the car. She was evidently on her way from some suffrage meeting up the state, and improved the shining hour by spreading documents through the train. It is perhaps due in no small measure to the presence of such women as Miss Carpenter that the Roosevelt convention has been distinguished by the absence of such undignified meanness as have marked previous conventions. One sees as another was received by the Rooseveltites the assertion that he thought the ballot just as necessary for one sex as for the other. The great rejoicing by the suffragists. The almost religious character of the proceedings at Chicago, the singing of hymns and the good old songs, and the whole character of the demonstration, all are the influence in Washington order at the previous conventions—it was so different.

Advocacy of gardening by urban and suburban housewives, just urged by Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of New York, is a very real and practical step toward the reduction of the cost of living might seek an establishment precedent in Germany, where the city of Berlin has encouraged its citizens to plant a small plot of land at a rate of about 2 cents a square yard per annum, on which to raise their own vegetables and fruit and it possible a sufficient quantity to afford some for sale. The lessees come from the industrial workers, postal employees, and most tradespeople and modest suburban housewives, who vie with each other in the production of the most successful, most attractive, and most profitable garden plot. The municipality places certain restrictions on the use of the land, and the fences shall divide the various plots. Strawberries, potatoes, carrots, peas, and beans are the favorite products, while many of the more expensive lota contain fruit trees. The advantages in outdoor exercise, fresh food stuffs and reduced cost of living are marked. Perhaps the doughy mayor might find suggestions in this scheme for the betterment of his own laudable project.

Already Boston's Zoo, recently described in these columns as agitating the transit experts who will have to transport thousands of thousands of people visiting Mr. Burhill's parents. They will spend a week in St. John the guests of Mrs. R. Chipman Skinner.

unusually elected by means of pressure brought to bear through a group of Americans interested in obtaining land grants and other concessions. He is doing all that lies within his power to get by force the election through him, to explain him to his obligations, and in doing so he is violating all of the rules that your state department had down for our guidance.

"The Central American Court of Justice, at Cartago, Costa Rica, and the Presidents of Honduras and Salvador, offered Nicaragua all possible help and counsel, in an effort to avoid further disturbance, bloodshed and the loss of the character of Central Americans in general. Mena refused to accept these proffers and, by so doing, set himself outside the pale.

"Unhappily we assert that Mena's only support is obtained from an American company that is attempting to exploit the natural wealth of Nicaragua to its own advantage, believing that if he can overthrow President Diaz he will give the company grants to enormous tracts of land which it covets. The company is backing Mena with money and is interested in leading Nicaragua the money that the last congress authorized her to borrow, although it must be confessed that they have no absolute faith in the security of the loan. Furthermore, please note, as an indication of the brotherly spirit that prevails among the majority of Central Americans, who are sick of revolutions, that the Salvadoran government offered moral, military and financial assistance.
