

THE TRAIL OF A TENDERFOOT

TENDERFOOT GOES A-HUNTING

I

THE TENDERFOOT

IT is one of the absolute conditions of human life and achievement that we begin somewhere with a very scant knowledge of the business of living—how to walk, how to eat, how to spell, how to “sass back,” and how to hold our own. Even in the matter of that primordial business, hunting, a human being has to be a tenderfoot, more or less, at some stage of the game. The mighty Nimrod probably was a tenderfoot in his earlier days. Even Theodore Roosevelt may have been one.
