"War," is the title of an important contribution by Prof. Goldwin Smith to the October Canadian Magazine. It has long been known that this sage observer of events is strongly opposed to war in any form. He concludes his paper as follows:—"For the writer, a look at the contents of a field hospital, which he chanced to see after an engagement, was enough. Not all the soldiers who slay and burn are fighting for their country. Some are mere mercenaries, slaying and burning for hire. Sir John Macdonald told the writer that there had been 40,000 Canadians enlisted in the American civil war. That war will soon cease and give place to rational modes of settling questions between nations is more than can be hoped for. But we may learn to think seriously of war as the curse it really is, and to abstain from invoking or applauding it. There need be no detraction from the honor due to the genuine soldier, who goes forth at the bidding of his country, and is responsible neither for the cause of the war or its inevitable consequences. But we need not cultivate militarism."

Threshers' Troubles

A rather peculiar wage case was due to be heard this morning at the police barracks. Some twenty men were effected, having worked for a threshing outfit without receiving any wages they declared. One of the men who comes from Ontario is suing Jerry Connor, the owner of the outfit, for $21.85 as a test case. The wages of the men amount to some $620.

Before court proceedings began Connor explained to the magistrate that he was unable to pay the men as the money which the machine had earned had been garnished by the stores where he got his supplies, and by the manufacturers of the outfit. The amount garnished was as much as the machine had earned so that there was nothing left for wages. The court adjourned to get legal advice on the matter.

At 11.15 the case was resumed, F. M. Brown appealing for the plaintiff, Lewis Fern, on oath gave evidence that he was engaged by Connor, but that he had received no pay for the ten days he had been working. Connor then explained the circumstances and admitted that he owed the wages. He had been threshing at two places but when he found that what he earned was being garnished he quit work as he did not wish to beat the men out of their wages. He had plenty of work ahead, he said, but he thought it was no use going on like that. He had same stock, but there were lien notes against them. Asked by Mr. Brown if he had any crop himself he replied that he had but he had been paid for it before it was cut to enable him to carry on his summer's work.

As a way out of the difficulty Mr. Brown suggested that the men file claims for their wages with the court and they would be heard at the next district court in November. He was of the opinion that the judge would reserve the wages of the men against any garnishee of the manufacturer or agent for the machinery. This the men agreed to do as the only course to recover their wages.—Saskatoon Phoenix.
