

PAGE

Plate V. A typical view of the upland plain-like surface of Keele mountains.....	127
“ VI. A typical view of the upland on Keele mountains, illustrating the equiplanating process which is there in evidence.....	129
“ VII. A typical view between Keele and Ogilvie mountains....	131
“ VIII. View between Keele and Ogilvie mountains.....	133
“ IX. The valley of Bern creek in the vicinity of the 141st meridian.....	135
“ X. A typical view of the Ogilvie mountains, looking northward across the valley of Cathedral creek.....	137
“ XI. Showing the southeastern face of Mt. Barlow, one of the typical peaks of the Ogilvie mountains.....	139
“ XII. Looking down Darcy creek toward Porcupine river..	141
“ XIII. The southwestern face of Mt. Slipper.....	143
“ XIV. A typical slate-phyllite ridge-top just north of Runt creek.	145
“ XV. Looking northward across Ogilvie mountains from a point just north of McCann hill.....	147
“ XVI. A typical shale-sandstone exposure consisting of Mesozoic beds in the north bank of Kandik river.....	149