

taste. Against the latter not a solitary offence can be adduced—surely no common praise, when an admiring son is the biographer.

We sincerely hope the memoir will have as wide a circulation as can reasonably be expected for one so voluminous. Expressing our own sense of obligation to the accomplished biographer, we would suggest the great desirability of an abridged edition, adapted for circulation amongst the bulk of our lay people throughout the province; for we are convinced that it would be most helpful to the promotion of sound religious principles, of increased attachment to our Church, and of more fervent piety.

singu-
course,
fancy,
an dis-
te and s from
he had
asure.
sensi-
m and adence
for the most ble for
gaunt
inion
ion of
he will pisco-
urch-
atmos
and it
t, and a pre-
may which ay in
ding roved
S. P. roved
his
away
ishop
r the
ous-
f so

this
the g of
shop
good