WAS FROM MISSOURI

A tombstone inscription to be found in a graveyard over in Scotland reads as follows:

"Remember, man, as you pass by, As you are now, so once was I. As I am now, so you shall be, Prepare in time to follow me."
No doubt some Scotch wit inscribed this beneath:

"To follow you I'll not consent, Until I know which way you went."

A London professor is trying to learn what makes mountains. That's easy. The valleys in between.

Hon. George S. Henry, Ontario minister of public works and highways, has announced a change in the method of financing the planting of trees along public highways. Instead of sending out his own workmen, he says, the new government has a scheme whereby farmers planting trees in front of their own property will be bonused so much per tree for planting.

Last week there arrived in Guelph a man who "spotted" a wooden peg-leg which is a common sight now-a-days. This man was otherwise husky enough physically, but also wore a down-and-out look as he peddled needles and such small wares from door to door, easily making sales because of his apparent deformity. At the week-end, having finished with that city, a man tallying with the description of the peddler, walked briskly into the Canadian National station threw his grip on the floor and another parcel loosely wrapped. An employee in straightening up the place picked up the parcel and was surprised to find it the identical peg-leg worn by the peddler previously. The miracle of securing the perfectly good leg in place of the wooden stump is left to conjecture.

THE EDITOR'S HARD WORK

The Bumbleton Banner strives to please everybody, but occasionally the editor makes enemies when he is doing his best to make friends. One day last week Mrs. Joel Larkspur went to the Banner office and showed the editor an article she had clipped from a paper years before. It was a bitter attack on people who keep biting dogs, and Mrs. Larkspur offered to let the editor have the clipping if he would publish it. "It is nothing to me," she said, "but I feel that it might have the effect of making people think about such things." The following day Mrs. Tom Jason brought the editor a little clipping about dogs. "The dog is man's best friend," was the way the article began, and it wound up by saying that people who didn't like dogs would bear watching. Mrs. Jason of the Banner thanked Mrs. Jason for bringing him the clipping, and he felt that by publishing the no little articles he would make at least two friends. The Banner is published on Friday, and early Friday afternoon Mrs. Larkspur sent the piece about biting dogs and she rejoiced because it was in such a prominent place that Mrs. Jason couldn't fail to see it. But when she saw the little story about the dog being man's best friend she was just positive that the editor had either published it for the purpose of getting back at her or that he had told Mrs. Jason about the biting-dog and invited her to bring in something on the other side. In either event she had been mistreated, and she was going to do everything in her power to induce someone else to start a paper in Bumbleton. And Mrs. Jason, too, was angry at the editor. "I was thinking of no one in particular," she said, "when I gave that clipping to the editor, but it is plain that he and Mrs. Larkspur got together and published the story about the biting dog just for my benefit. Mrs. Larkspur and her outfit are beneath my notice, but I will make that nasty Bumbleton Banner suffer."

PALMERSTON HARNESS SHOP ROBBED OF $200

J. Anderson, a merchant of Palmerston, has notified the provincial police that $200 in cash was taken from his harness shop on Saturday while he was absent from the store. All but $50 of the amount was found later in the day in a snowdrift a few yards away from the shop, but the police have no clue that might assist them in making an arrest. The matter has been placed in the hands of Provincial Constable Melville, who is investigating.

FOOREST SPECIMEN OF HUMANITY SHOULD ANOTHER WAR COME

One of the poorest specimens of humanity we know is the fellow who goes around growling about the town being dead. Every small community has this insect and he certainly is not to be rated among its assets. His individual lamentations are on foot for the town's improvement and yet whenever a live suggestion is brought forward he is against it every time because there is something or other the matter with it and he goes around discouraging others who are interested in the scheme. It constantly makes him sore, he says, the way the townspeople won't pull together. Yet he himself is the biggest knocker in the community! This town groucher never starts anything new because he feels himself to be trying to do it. If anybody else suggests any he wants to know what's the "god-forsaken place" he's trying to get it going. Wood anything in this "god-forsaken place" The man who will help the town to prosper, and fortunately this class of individual is getting more numerous in the town, is the citizen who cheerfully lends his support to every movement for the town's advancement, who will banish prejudice and "give and take" a bit for the community's welfare. And when he sees some opportunity for public improvement he has a new idea he will hopefully advance it. His ideals for his home town h maintains in spite of occasional discouragement. Trying always to think well of his neighbor and always speaking a good word for the town where he lives and makes his living; this man will win out in the end. He is the town's best asset. —Wetaskiwin Times.

It may be recalled that the late President Wilson at the close of the great war declared that in event of another war there ought to be no conscription, not only of young men fit for service in the field, but of every man in the republic—each to serve his country "for the duration" of the war in whatever capacity he happened to find himself or to which the nation might assign him. He proposed that when the nation makes war every inhabitant be called to the colors, some to fight, some to man the lines of communication, some to make munitions, some to provide food, some to do the work and chores of the country—but none to stand aloof, none to pursue their own private gain, none to take advantage of the nation's necessitous condition and greatly pile up fortunes for themselves while others lose everything, including life itself. Woodrow Wilson had opportunities such a handful it is that while braver men swarm about the war chest of the nation and extract everything they can get away with. He declared that if another war came the whole nation should be conscripted and the job of war worked at by the entire man-power and resources of the nation until it was done.
