We have just put in, at great expense, a WONDERFUL MACHINE, heated by steam, for only passing through the rollers once; the result—Work is done much faster, and the rollers last much longer than when heated by the old method, heated by gas, which has to pass through the rollers eight times.
P.S.—We have also added a newly invented machine to iron the edges of Collars and Cuffs.

By the Hand of Providence

By Martha McCulloch-Williams

Copyright, 1904, by Martha McCulloch-Williams

Jemmy was explaining to Amelia: "This is the way you make a hortus sicus; You get a big book with no print in it, and then paste it full of weeds and flowers and grass and little bits of bushes, but you have to dry, dry, dry 'em. Sicus is Latin for just as dry as a bone."

"I wonder could we put in Benjamin Byram, Esq.?" Bess speculated plaintively. "Heaven knows he's dry enough just as he stands. Then think of the relief if he was once where you could shut him up and off at will!" Prue giggled outright. "He does talk thirteen to the dozen," she said. "But who wouldn't, with all his chances? Nature made him a fool of the first water, and fate chipped in by giving him a fortune and a doting family."

"Benjamin the Blatant, Tom Rodman calls him," Bess began, still plaintive. Jemmy came charging at her, with Amelia hot upon his heels, and shouting: "You hush, Aunt Bess! You want lose me my pony! Mister Byram says he'll give me a Shetland if I don't let nobody say a word against him in this house."

"I believe he wants Jem to fight with Mister Tom Rodman," Amelia interrupted angrily, her head the least bit aside. "And I ain't goin' to help him fight," she added pointedly, "cause Mister Tom says I'm his sweetheart. He's goin' to wait for me to grow up. He thinks I'm a heap prettier'n Aunt Bess right now."

"How about me?" Prue asked, giggling more than ever. Amelia looked reflectively, but Jemmy stuck his hands in his pockets, set his feet far apart and said, sticking out his chin after the manner of his model, Benjamin Byram, "Why, Prudy, you know nobody will ever look at you so long as Aunt Bess and Melia are around." "Won't they, indeed?" Prue queried, drawing down the corners of her mouth meekly, although her eyes twinkled. Jemmy swung on his heel, saying magisterially: "Course not. Why, you're all freckled same as a turkey egg and haven't hardly got meat enough to wrap up your long bones."

"Upon my soul! Say, Miss Prue, shall I take him out and drown him?" Tom Rodman asked, coming through the door as he spoke. But Jemmy only grinned at him—Jemmy was nine and Prue eighteen. They were the best of comrades, despite his brutal frankness. Prue made a dash at him, stood him upon his head, then swung him by an arm and a leg, chanting:

"Here he goes! Fingers and toes! Up the chimney when the wind blows!" ending in a feint of flinging Jemmy upon the open fire. Amelia improved the opportunity to pull her brother's hair until he howled. They were twins and pretty badly spoiled, as was but natural, since they had grown up motherless in their grandfather's house.

"I'll swing you by your legs, Prudy, when I'm a man. You see if I don't!" Jemmy said, trying to scowl, but grinning in spite of himself. Tom Rodman picked the boy up and flung him across his shoulder, saying gruffly: "I hate to do it, but there's nothing else for it. Jemmy, I've been telling you this ever so long I'd carry you to the cypress if you did not behave better. Stop wriggling. You can't get away. But I'll let you kiss Melia and the others goodby. Be quick! You won't ever see them again."

"Kiss 'em all yourself. That's what you're after," Jemmy, the astute, piped huskily as Tom carried him close to Aunt Bess. His arms were free. Impulsively he laid hold of the two heads and yanked them together, locking his arms behind the two necks and holding them tight, laughing uproariously all the while. Tom was a gallant fellow. He could do no less than kiss Bess at his heart's bid. And just as he was about to do so, he saw that Mr. Byram, the rich distant cousin, who had been for three weeks a guest at Fairlaw.

Mr. Byram had come there exploring. He felt the need of a wife rather than the want of one. Bess, who was tall and twenty and the very moral of gracious stateliness when she chose to be, had captivated him out of hand. He would have proposed to her the second day of his visit, never doubting what her answer she would make, but that his sense of propriety forbade. Besides, it would not do to dazzle her too suddenly. He must let the great prospects break gently upon her as dawn broke over the world. So he had been nobly impartial in his devotions, so much so he had twinges of conscience whenever he thought of Prue. She was hardly more than a schoolgirl, to be sure, but quite mature enough to break her heart over loss of him if she once let herself seriously believe she had a chance of being Mrs. Byram.

Of Tom Rodman he had taken no more account than to set him down as an impertinent puppy, with a knack of coming in at all hours, especially when Mr. Byram least expected or wanted him. To discover him kissing Bess in the face of everybody made Benjamin the Blatant simply furious. All the more furious that Jemmy cried out gleefully: "Mister Byram! Mister Byram! Come help me hold 'em! They tried to skeer me, but I'm beatin' 'em at their own game!" "Let loose, you little varmint! Shut up!" Tom commanded. Prue made a dash at the tangle and deftly untwined Jemmy's fingers, letting Bess escape. Mr. Byram stood speechless in wrath and amazement until Amelia, sidling up to him, laid her hand within his and said, with the least toss of the head: "They ain't beavin' ugly. Mister Tom will be Aunt Bess' nephew when he marries me, and the Fairlies always kiss their kinfolk, if they ain't too far off and great big stuffs into the bargain. Prue and Aunt Bess said so the first night you came."

"Indeed!" Mr. Byram exploded. "With my coming, I suppose, for a text. Well, young ladies, I see in all this the hand of Providence. A just and ever watchful God would not permit designs, no doubt, to tempt you by my wealth and position, although you are so wholly incapable of appreciating a man of my character!"

"Kindly come outside with me before you say any more," Tom Rodman interrupted, setting Jemmy down with a thump and putting himself in front of Bess, who had grown very white and had eyes of scorching flame. Prue, contrarywise, had flushed so scarlet it all her freckles. Tom reached a hand to her and drew her toward him, while he went on steadily: "You talk to me like a man, and answer it. I'm that man. Bess and Prue have no brother, and Mr. Fairlie is past fighting age. But Prue belongs to me, and that gives me the right to stand up for 'em. So you come along! We'll settle this minute we strike the turnpike and neutral ground."

"Hush, Tom! Remember he's our guest!" Bess pleaded. Prue gave her a rueful smile. Amelia looked it to cry over the toppling of her air castle, but Jemmy turned a hand-spring by way of showing his joy in the "melay." As he came up standing, he stepped in front of Byram, swelled out his chest and said stoutly:

"Don't you try no crawfish games! You know you wanted to marry Aunt Bess! You told me so and said I must court her for you. I ain't very big, but if you try to go back on her I'll let you know I can shoot my little gun, and that's more than you can do. We won't have a regular duel, like gentlemen do. Let's try a button match instead, and if I butt you over, like David did Goliath, you'll propose to Aunt Bess same as ever and gimme that Shetland you've been talkin' so much about."

"Ladies and Gentlemen, goodby," Mr. Byram began in his most ceremonious voice. He got no further. Jemmy went at him like a catapult and bowed him down and out of the door, only stopping when his enemy lay prostrate upon the hall threshold. There the grownups came to the rescue and so managed it that Mr. Byram went off an hour later, somewhat bruised in his person and self esteem, but as to his outer man whole and speckless. When the carriage rolled away with him Tom Rodman drew a long breath and said as he tossed a foreign letter to Bess: "Your sweetheart is coming home by the next steamer. Had a cable this morning. You see, I have been writing him things. He will agree with me and the late Byram that in all this there is unmistakably the hand of Providence."

Talent Promptly Recognized.

The businesslike young man approached the man at the desk. "I'll ask only a minute of your time," he said. "I want to know if you wouldn't like to subscribe for a copy of this book. I've sold 150 of 'em in this building in the last three days." The man at the desk took the book and looked at it. He noted its utter worthlessness from a literary point of view, its tawdry binding and the cheapness of the paper on which it was printed. Then he said:

"Young man, do you mean to tell me seriously that you have sold 150 copies of that book in this one building?" "Yes, sir. Here's my order book. You can look at the signatures yourself. Every one of them is genuine."

"I see. Young fellow, I don't know how much you are making out of this business, but I'll give you twice as much, whatever it is, if you'll take hold of a patent nose ring. I was fool enough to drop a lot of money in a few years ago and help me to dispose of a stock of 2,000 dozen of 'em I've still got on hand."—Chicago Tribune.

Ivory Carving in China and Japan.

In China and Japan ivory has been carved, the ivory balls incised inside one another being specially noted. Many theories have been formed as to these balls have been cut. Perhaps a probable one is that a ball of ivory was taken, around the top and bottom ends of which four small holes were carved out, gradually diminishing in size toward the center until the axis of the one hole met the axis of the other or lower one at right angles in the center of the ball and that then small tools were inserted and a thin layer of ivory forming a part of a circle from one hole to its lower corresponding one was cut and loosened from the whole mass. So, gradually cutting from one hole to the next one, a complete inner circle was eventually loosened, the circles themselves afterward being cut into the required pattern.—Chambers' Journal.

The Dictionary Habit.

"Yes, it's a good thing for a man to refer to the dictionary, but this practice can often be carried to excess," said a well known magazine writer. "Why, I've seen a man get so much attached to this habit," he continued, "that he could not write an ordinary letter without turning to the dictionary three or four times in order to ascertain some big words that he could use. This, I think, is a very great waste of time, as he does not express his meaning in a bit better than if he had used some shorter and really English words."

ANOTHER VOICE ON THE PRAIRIES

Tells of Diabetes Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

W. G. Bartleman Could Get No Relief Till He Tried the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Wapella, Assa., N. W. T., Aug. 22.—(Special).—This thriving town furnishes one of the most remarkable cures of Kidney Disease that has ever been reported on the prairies. Mr. Wm. G. Bartleman, a well-known farmer, is the man cured, and he makes the following statement: "I had Kidney Trouble and it developed into Diabetes. I went to the doctor but his treatment was of no use whatever to me. I began to take Dodd's Kidney Pills in December, 1903. I took them all winter and summer while I was unable to work my farm. I took twelve boxes in all and in August I was able to work. "Now I am quite strong. I worked all winter without pains in my back or any part of my body. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me." If "Diabetes" Disease is of long standing, it takes time to cure it. But Dodd's Kidney Pills will do it.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out of this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are cured by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hull's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Best Child Till Died Came.

Whitby, Aug. 26.—George Johnson, of the Township of Reach, a widower and the father of six little children, received his trial here Wednesday at the County Judge's Criminal Court, on the charge of inflicting bodily harm on his little boy, aged 12. The boy, who is an under-sized, delicate looking little fellow, still bears the marks of the fearful beating given him over a week ago. The unnatural father gave an excuse that he did not think he was hitting him so hard until he saw the blood come. He used a clothes-line to flog the little fellow with. Judge McCrimmon found Johnson guilty and remanded him for sentence until homes are found for the children. Feeling is very bitter towards the prisoner.

IS YOUR BREATH BAD?

TRAP LANTERNS

How Lenses Are Made

Entomologists and experiment station authorities have recently gone to considerable pains to find out if there is really any virtue in trap lanterns and so-called "moth-catchers."

The results of the experiments as a whole were not favorable to the trap lanterns. The results did not indicate that their general use as applicable to all insects is advisable, though in a few cases they were found highly serviceable.

Dr. L. M. Steadman, of Missouri university, who has recently been experimenting along this line, reports that he found tin mirrors, glass and wire-netting wings equally efficient in catching insects in the lantern.

The experiments of Dr. Steadman were almost entirely with orchard pests, and to ascertain what advantage trap lanterns or "moth catchers" as a whole did not indicate that trap lanterns are advisable for general use in orchards.

M. V. Slingerland, of the Cornell university experiment station has perhaps devoted more time to testing trap lanterns and "moth catchers" than any other authority in this country in recent years. Of the general conclusions which he reached he says:

"Many kinds of insects are most active at night, and are then often attracted to any light, but there are hosts of insects that fly mostly in the daytime. A trap may attract and kill 10,000 or 20,000 insects in a season, but most of the household pests, most of the fruit growers' insect enemies, and nearly all of the serious pests of the gardener or general grower of field crops, cannot be caught in numbers with trap lanterns. "Trap lanterns may prove useful under certain conditions; where some lighting insect becomes a pest in greenhouses, or possibly in the case of some local pest, whose period of flight is sharply defined and of short duration. No one, however, has yet conclusively shown that any insect pest cannot be more effectively and cheaply combated in some other way than by the use of 'moth catchers' or trap lanterns."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

WHAT A WIFE MUST BE.

You are aware that no woman can make good for her husband's deficiencies. The best wife in the world cannot do it.

There are many things, though, that the wife of a man of average ability can do for him which will make her price above rubies and go a long way toward accomplishing his success in life.

One of these things is to keep alive his faith in himself. There comes a time in every man's career when his fate rests in his wife's hands. It is when the battle goes against him and he is tempted to give up in despair.

Then if his wife reminds him that luck always has been against him, that she told him he would fail, and she knows he never can succeed, that man's doom is sealed.

On the other hand, if he goes ahead hopefully, always beckoning and cheering, telling him she knows he can overcome all obstacles, steadily showing her faith in him, and refusing to give it up, she will inspire him with the courage and determination which will eventually win success.

Another way in which she can help him is by taking an interest in his business. Whether he sells salt herring or writes sonnets, she ought to make him feel it a pleasure to talk to her about what he has been doing.

She may know little about his occupation, but if she is sensibly interested in his intentions will be flashes of genius by which any man might profit.

A man's business is closer to his heart than anything else, and it is a foolish woman indeed who does not see the benefits both may derive from confiding in that score. Then a woman may be of invaluable assistance to her husband by making friends for him, or she can do him incalculable harm by making enemies. She can selfishly tie him up by her pet dislikes, or she can urge him out among people who can help him.

Above all other ways, she can prosper his career by keeping home comfortable for him. It is strange how many women fail to realize that a home is the power-house in which the wage-earners of the family should gather energy to fight and win the battle of life.

Every fireside ought to be a haven of peace, where jaded nerves may be soothed and restored. If the woman who is happily married chooses to exhaust her husband's strength on foolish household tasks, say him with bad cooking, and otherwise give him a hit-or-miss home life, she is deliberately pulling him down into obscurity.

If she builds him up with proper food, sends him out cheered and rested and restored, with faith in himself and in her, she is pushing him straight on to success.—Weekly Wellcome.

BEST SELLING BOOK IN THE WORLD.

The Bible is the best selling book in the world. It leads and by a long interval, all other publications in copies purchased in the ordinary channels of trade without regard to what may be called the official distribution.

Every bookstore, which undertakes to carry a full line of stock, sells the Bible. Several important corporations confine themselves to the manufacture and sale of Bibles, and others find in the Bible their leading feature. Of no other book can this be said.

Speaking some time ago of the insatiable demand for the Bible as an article of merchandise, an officer of the Methodist Book Concern said: "Like all publishers, we have to keep watch of the sale of books in general, even the most popular, so as not to get overstocked. But this never occurs in printing the Bible. We just keep the presses steadily at work, and if we happen to find that we have 40,000 or 50,000 copies on hand it gives us no uneasiness. We are sure to sell them, and we go straight ahead printing."

The cheap excursions to St. Louis Fair still continue, and now is the time for people intending to visit this Fair, to do so. Mr. W. E. Rispin City Ticket Agent, Grand Trunk and Wabash Railways, advises us that he sells coach excursion tickets on Wednesdays and Thursdays good to return with seven days at $11.15 each, fifteen day tickets good to leave any time, at $15 each, and sixty day tickets at $20 each.
