HEADS OR TAILS?

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

"Excuse me, Tom," she said one day, "but if I am to be your wife I think I have a right to know whether it is to be months or years before the wedding."

"I wish I could tell you, but I can't. I'm afraid you'll have to wait till I am in a position to say 'Name the day.'"

"Why can't I know what contributes to or detracts from your ability to say that?"

"Well, you had better not know the many drawbacks that continually come up before me. Naturally they are discouraging. If I told you about them they would fret you. That would react on me, and instead of having only myself to bolster up I would have you also."

There the matter dropped. One evening when he called on her she was not at home. He called again several times during the week and she was always away. Sunday evening he found her in. He mentioned having called without seeing her and expected her to give a reason for not being at home. She went on talking about other matters without doing so. He did not ask for an explanation, but when the next week he again found her out every evening that he called he expressed surprise at the change in her habits.

"I presume you consider," she said, "that you have a right to know everything that I do. I don't admit that you have. We are not married and may never be married. Even when married you will only have a right to know what I am doing provided I know the same of you."

This was a view of the matter he had not considered. He was aware that it was intended as retaliation for his own refusal to give her his confidence, and he had nothing further to say.

Not long after this he took a partner in his business. Quite likely had not this withdrawal of confidence on both sides taken place he might have mentioned the fact of this addition to the firm and given the reason for it. It would certainly have been a pleasant matter to communicate, for the additional capital brought him almost certainly insured his success. But the struggle was on between the lovers, and one withholding of confidence brought another. She heard of the change in her lover's firm, but not from him.

It had scarcely occurred when he informed her that his affairs were now in such condition that he would be pleased to have her name the day. She named one year from the next first of January, in all about fifteen months.

By this time he was ready for any counterstroke she might make in this battle of denied confidences and did not ask her why she proposed to make him wait so long. But it did not suit her purpose to leave him in ignorance. She had accepted the position of assistant to a wealthy woman who was president of a society of suffragists and in consideration of certain advances made by her employer had agreed to serve eighteen months. She was busy most of the day and in the evening wrote a great many letters to the president's name.

She had hoped that he would show some disappointment in having to wait so long for her, but if he felt it he controlled his expression. He merely said that, such being the case, they would have to wait, but since a great deal might happen in a year and a half, perhaps it would be better to leave the matter of the wedding day open. She liked this; her idea was to let him down to a fixed day and make him wait for it.

He did not call so often as formerly, giving as a reason that he did not care to draw her away from her duties. She said that the correspondence had been delegated to another, and her evenings would be free. Nevertheless he continued his visits to Sunday nights.

This status of engagement with the period of her engagement with the president was about to expire, when her lover informed her that his business would require a six months' trip abroad, and the wedding had better be postponed till after his return. This was a home thrust, but she had a counterstroke ready. She told him that she concurred heartily. She had been offered the position of secretary to a wealthy bachelor and would like to try it for awhile. It would therefore suit her to postpone the day for a year instead of six months.

This was playing the joker. He cursed inwardly, but not outwardly. He said that a year's interval before the marriage would suit him very well. He was to leave on his trip in a week and would call the day before sailing to say goodby.

She went up to her room, locked the door and had a good cry. The day before he was to sail he called. The hour was 4 in the afternoon. The ship was to be pulled out at 2 the next morning.

"I am going to flip a coin," he said. She abated her pride so far as to ask him what for, and he said he would tell her if it came down heads up. If it came down tails there would be nothing to tell.

It came down heads. "I flipped," he said, "to determine whether we should continue this nonsense longer or that we be married this evening, go aboard the ship by midnight and take the trip together. It was heads that we do."

She flew upstairs to do her packing. They were on board by 11 p. m.

Lakeville Leaflets

Miss Bertha Carvell of Boston, Mass., is visiting her brothers, the Hon. F. B. Carvell, of Woodstock, and R. L. Carvell of this village. We are all glad to see her genial face once more.

Miss May Campbell, who underwent an operation for appendicitis, at the Fisher Memorial Hospital, on the 5th inst., was doing well at last report. Mrs. Wm. Lawrence who also underwent an operation for appendicitis at her home by Dr. Belyea of Hartland, is doing well. She is attended by Miss Langdon and Miss Annie Lindsay, trained nurses.

John Hayward, ex-postmaster of Bristol, is here visiting his old friend, J. E. Williams. Mr. Hayward came from England in the winter and settled at Bristol, where he entered the woodworking business. Later he took over the post office of that place and retained that position until a year or so ago. Despite his age Mr. Hayward is still hale and hearty.

Miss Dorothy Stanford who graduated from the Provincial Normal School arrived home on the 13th. She is looking well and expects to take a school next term.

Ray Gee, son of H. M. Gee of this place, who is in the employ of the B. & A. Railroad Co., Presque Isle, Me., spent last week-end with his parents.

Miss Stokes of Bloomfield Corner, who is employed by W. F. Anderson, spent the week-end with her parents.

We are sorry to learn of the illness of Marshall Tracey, Dr. H. S. Wright is in attendance and we hope for a speedy recovery.

W. H. Bradbury of Pinder, York Co., chief fire warden of this county, passed through here on his way from Miramichi. He reports numerous forest fires in that vicinity.

J. C. Kinney and family spent the week-end with friends at Mars Hill. We had quite a blaze here on Sunday afternoon, June 15, when the tool house of the C. N. R. was destroyed. The fire was discovered about two o'clock and before anything could be done the whole inside was in flames. Two barrels of gasoline with other oil fed the fire. One barrel exploded sending smoke and flame high in the air and taking the roof off the building. The loss is estimated to be around $700. The cause of the fire is unknown.

EDMUNDSTON

T. C. L. Ketchum, court reporter of Woodstock, was in town this week.

A great many of our male citizens are in St. John this week attending the meetings of "The Shrine."

A public meeting with moving pictures at 8.30 p.m., Sunday, at the Star Theatre, showing work done by Methodist at the home for the blind in Halifax. No charge for admittance.

Alderman St. Onge and Mrs. St. Onge with Miss Lynch and Mrs. Four-nier of St. Quintin returned from an automobile trip to Quebec City, Montreal and St. Anne de Belleville on Sunday after being gone a week. The efficient chauffeur was Ernest Rice.

One of the biggest sale events in Edmundston is now taking place at the old and well known store of Jos. Moscovitz. Mr. Moscovitz has felt the depression in Edmundston as have the other merchants, and a account of financial stringency was forced to put on this sale. The high class suits, shirts, ties, overcoats and in fact, everything in the store, has been marked down below cost—in some cases below the cost of manufacture. Seldom has it been our lot to see such bargains as is being offered to the public through this sale. The Editor reviewed the stock prior to the sale, and has no hesitation in saying that bargains, in every line of male clothing is offered our citizens at fifty and sixty cents on the dollar. We anticipate that during the sale the store will be crowded and that many people will avail themselves of this unique opportunity. Everybody knows the high class of goods kept by Mr. Moscovitz, and any article purchased there bears the stamp of quality. We sincerely regret that this old established firm finds itself in the position that it has to make such a sacrifice at this time, but we are glad that the people of Edmundston will reap the advantage. The Editor returned from Montreal on Monday.

R. D. Murphy is in Montreal this week.

Douglas Stevens, sr. and Douglas Stevens, jr., are in town this week.

J. Downs of Halifax, representing the Maritime School for the Blind, is in Edmundston this week.

Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. Burpee and Miles Burpee motored to Fredericton last week. They are expected to return either the end of this week or the first of next.

Mrs. R. McDonald of Burit's Corner, N. B., and Mrs. P. C. Kantner of San Francisco, has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. McDonald for the past two weeks. The former is Mr. McDonald's mother, and the latter his sister, who is visiting in the East for the summer.

Jos. Savard driving a rig on Canada Road near A. St. Onge's store on Wednesday met with an accident which might have been much more serious. One of the shafts had broken and was sticking into the horse which became unmanageable and dashed into a telephone pole throwing the driver over the dashboard, and then got free by the breaking of the harness. Savard was not much hurt. The road at the time was free of traffic and there were not many children around or the stor would have been different. The horse was caught by LaChance's store.

The Town Council at its last meeting appointed fifteen new constables whose special duty it will be to regulate the speed maniacs in the town. They have orders to report any one driving automobiles in the town faster than fifteen miles an hour. Those doing so render themselves liable to a fine of from $10 to $20 on conviction, and on a second offence to a cancellation of their license.

We regret to hear that Doris Miller, 21st ave., is quite ill at her home.

Miss Beth Rideout is home from Fredericton on account of indisposition. We hope that she will soon be better.

"Eczema All Over Arms Suffered for 12 Years"

Mrs. Murray Hough, Warton, Ont., writes:

"I had eczema for twelve years. Every once in a while it would break out and spread all over my arms. I tried all kinds of treatments to relieve it, but without success. One Spring it broke out and nothing gave me relief, even the salve I got from the doctor did no good. At last I tried Dr. Chase's Ointment and it healed the eczema in a short time. That is over a year ago, and I have had no return of the trouble."
