Be sure you get our brand, as other Canadian Wines are sold as Pelée brand. Brander, Pelée, Port, Dry Catawba, Sweet Catawba, Isabella, St. Augustine, Old Port, etc.

Dear Sir—My wife has been afflicted with nervous prostration for several years, using every kind of medicine recommended, but obtaining no relief until I procured some of your Pelée Wine, and in it was delighted to say, has had the desired effect. It is the greatest tonic of my age. I think too much cannot be said in its praise and no house should be without it. We have recommended it to several suffering from a gripple debility, with like good results.

I am, yours gratefully, JOHN C. CLOWS. E. G. SCOVILL, Tea and Wine Merchant, 62 Union St., St. John, sole agent for Maritime Provinces. Telephone 028.

IF THOU HADST NEVER SMILED.

If thou hadst never smiled on me Or fondness for me shown, Despair's dark shadow would not now Around my heart be thrown. The hopes I cherished long ago, In happy boyhood's years, Have perished—have been washed away By many bitter tears.

Yet still my heart in secret still With fond affection beats, Although we never meet face to face, Again in love may meet. So fare thee well; the die is cast, Death soon shall close the scene, But you and I shall never part. The same as we have been. —New York Ledger.

BOILING WATER WITHOUT FIRE.

The Only Trick About It Is to Stir It Long and Hard Enough. It is possible to make a pall of water boil without applying external heat to it in any way. In fact, you can make a pall of water boil by simply stirring it with a wooden paddle. This was performed in the physical laboratory of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, and any one may do it with a little trouble and perseverance.

All you have to do is to place your water in a pall—it may be too water if necessary—and stir it with a wooden paddle. If you keep at it long enough, it will certainly boil. Five hours of constant and rapid stirring are sufficient to perform the feat successfully. The water will after a time grow warm, and then it will grow hot—so hot, in fact, that you cannot hold your hand in it, and finally it will boil.

Professor Ames of Johns Hopkins annually illustrates to the students the phenomenon of heat by having one of his students perform the trick in front of his class. It is a tiresome job, but perfectly feasible. The point which Professor Ames wishes to illustrate is what is known as the mechanical equivalent of heat. It requires just so many foot pounds of work to develop a given quantity of heat. By turning the paddle in the water at a regular speed it is possible to find out just how much work is required to raise the temperature of water one degree. The best measurement so far made, and is in fact the one which is accepted as the standard of the world, is that which was measured in Johns Hopkins University.

Heat is developed in almost any substance which is subjected to continuous or very violent action. It is an old trick for a blacksmith to forge without fire. Long continued and violent hammering on two pieces of iron will heat them to such an extent that they can be welded together. A lead bullet, if shot directly at a stone wall, will develop heat enough by the contact to melt and fall to the ground as a thin mass. There are many other occasions wherein this mechanical development of heat becomes manifest.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Ethics and Business Cashed. "First began my practice," the doctor remarked between the puffs of a cigar, "but I found it a more truthful exponent of ethics than I should have supposed. I was not a doctor, and in it was the notice of the recovery of a little girl in the town, and at the conclusion was the brief but flattering compliments, 'Dr. Grant in attendance.' I confess I thought better of the fellow and was pleased. The next week, however, one of my patients died, and at the conclusion of a very pathetic obituary notice was that same line, 'Dr. Grant in attendance.' You ought to have seen me get to the office and get an advertisement in 'The Raxoo.'—Denver Times.

Eye Language. No part of the human countenance engages our attention so frequently as the eyes. When we face to face conversation, we do not look at the lips—although, as a rule, the attention is very quickly taken by any movement of the mouth. In fact, one usually feels that there is a sense of incompleteness in the association of mind with mind by means of conversation if there is not a continual interchange of glances, making a kind of running commentary on the words spoken. Now, why is there this continual meeting of eyes accompanying all kinds of human intercourse? Partly no doubt it is attributable to certain habits of comparative recent date. The eye, "the window of the soul," is a more truthful exponent of the inward thoughts than the tongue, and, seeing that speech is very frequently used to conceal the truth, but to conceal them, we look to the eye for confirmation or the reverse for what our ears are taking in.—Louis Robinson in Popular Science Monthly.

Furniture Polish. One of the best household floor and furniture polishes comes to us from the Japanese. It consists of one pint each of linseed oil and cold strong tea, the whites of two eggs and two ounces of spirits of salt. Shake well before using. Put a few drops on a pad of soft silk and rub hard, then polish with an old piece of silk. The work is tedious and fatiguing, but the effect is almost equal to new.

Oak Poisoning. Before exposure to poison oak or immediately after poisoning may be avoided by a hot bath in which has been dissolved two tablets of bichloride of mercury. Relief may be obtained after poisoning has occurred by washing the inflamed parts frequently with a strong solution of green soap. After bathing dust with formalin.

Elongated rifle bullets are made from leaden rods. A machine cuts them into the required lengths, stamps them into shape by means of steel dies and drops them finished into a box at the rate of 7,000 an hour.

Birds of prey are able to look at the sun without being dazzled because there is a membrane on the back of their eyes which is not being dazzled while they are sunning down at will.

RACCOON RITES.

Their Immersion in Infat. Coons and Their Washing of Food. The coon home at the Cincinnati zoo consists simply of a plot of ground about as large as a barn door of extra generous size would cover. It is surrounded by a wire fence four feet high, topped with a broad up curving iron rail, which prevents the little clownlike creatures from escaping. In the center of this yard is a tree 20 feet high and having many and heavy limbs. Near the base of the tree is a several foot square pool of water. This pool marks two very exclusive, very notable characteristics that distinguish the coon from any other animal. The pool is the coon's christening and food cleansing place.

When a coon gives birth to young, almost the first thing she does is to take her babies one by one in her mouth, and accompanied by the father coon, proceed slowly and solemnly to the pool. Arriving at its brink and while the father coon stands thoughtfully by the mother baptizes the little one beneath the wave with all the decorum of a Baptist or Episcopalian clergyman immersing a candidate for church membership. After lowering it into the water, she turns to the father and up again, Mrs. Coon and her husband wend their way back again to their family corner of the yard. This service, solemn and staid, is continued by Mr. and Mrs. Coon until every mother's son of their just arrived offspring has been duly christened. Viewed soberly, it is really one of the most unique, impressive professional performances imaginable. But the indescribable broadness of the picture made by the wee husband and wife as they go through with the performance is inimitable. If, to the gravity, dignity and solemnity of the performance, the father coon be added, the scene is almost every one who witnesses the scene a little bit of drama.

Almost any hour any day in the year you can find a group of people tossing bits of goodies to the coon. Upon picking up one of these Mr. or Mrs. Coon instantly, with the goodly delicacy and daintiness of a tooth, trove over to the pool and washes the morsel back and forth in the water two or three times, then returns to his favorite corner or up to his favorite croch in the tree, the little chap sets to devouring it in a way so devoted and so puffed out gulping humans to the blush.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

LOUISIANA UNDER SNAPE.

How the Office of Hangman in the Colony West Begging. When the court martial that Don Alejandro O'Reilly, the second Spanish governor of Louisiana, in 1769, had organized to convict through a verdict of death against Lafreniere and six of his companions as the leaders of the Louisiana revolution in Louisiana, the first man to be hanged was the colony O'Reilly sought in vain among the Louisiana men in Louisiana to find a man who would perform the abhorrent work of serving as hangman at the execution of the patriots. Not a man of the colony would accept the call. In this emergency O'Reilly was compelled to assign the congenial task of slaughtering the helpless crocodiles and Frenchmen to regular Spanish soldiers whom he had brought with him from Spain, and instead of being hanged, Lafreniere and the others were shot to death by a platoon of grenadiers in a space of ground near the site of present United States mint in New Orleans, which at that time was in the rear of the military garrison of the post.

The failure of O'Reilly to secure a hangman in the case of these unfortunate men called to mind of old French residents of New Orleans that day the interesting story of an African slave of the Missisquoi Company, of Company of the West, which 80 years previously had control of the colony of Louisiana under a charter granted by the regent of Orleans. The company offered Jeannot his freedom on condition that he would serve as public hangman of the colony. Jeannot appeared to agree to the proposition, but by afterwards repudiated the bargain. He then set his right arm with a hatchet. By this self inflicted mutilation Jeannot avoided the requisite duties of hangman for the colony, but he also lost his opportunity for freedom. However, the agents of the company, not knowing in what way to utilize Jeannot as a laborer, appointed him overseer of all the slaves belonging to it. Poor Jeannot was rewarded for his sacrifice of humanity and conscientiousness by receiving the respect and esteem of all the inhabitants of the colony during the rest of his life.—New Orleans Picayune.

Women and Foreign Travel. The matter of sex need not affect in the slightest the question of foreign travel. If an American girl wants to study art, music or languages and has the means, there need be the least reason why she should not go alone to Paris or Berlin or Vienna to do it. There is no greater fear of insult abroad than at home. The only difference without escort, but the same thing is true of the larger cities here.

In the mere matter of travel Europe offers far more comfort and convenience than America to women journeying alone or in parties without men. They need never touch their baggage or their trunks. At hotels and railway stations they will always be more courteously treated than men, and that is saying a good deal. And the "unprotected female" needs no protection. English women think nothing of taking their vacations on the continent, and a journey from New York to Los Angeles presents more terrors than one from London to Constantinople or Cairo.—Robert Luce in "Going Abroad."

Oak or Squash. A student asked the president of Oberlin college if he could not take a shorter course than that prescribed by the institution. "Oh, yes," was the reply, "but that depends upon what you want to make of yourself. When God wants to make an oak he takes 100 years, but when he wants to make a squash he takes six months."—New York Tribune.

One Way to Win Him Back. Mrs. Triggs—I'm afraid my husband is drifting away from me. What would you do to retain his love? Mrs. Paxton (who has had experience)—Give that sore eyed puddle dog of yours away and learn how to get up a square meal once in awhile.—Cleveland Leader.

Authorities differ as to the rate of growth of the human hair, and it is said to be very dissimilar in different individuals. The most usually accepted calculation gives 1/4 inch per annum.

Many a French mother buries her own hair and a favorite toy with her dead child "that it may not feel quite alone."
