Paris was on Sunday the scene of serious disturbances, recalling the aspects of the Commune. At the word of their commander, a crowd of anarchists made a charge and moved towards the church of St. Ambrose, where the rioters smashed the windows Proceeding thence to Fouburg du Temple, they formed up into a compact body. Hatchets were suddenly produced, with long knives stolen from the counters of shops, and a concerted rush was made upon the church of St Joseph. The aged sacristan, seeing the mob approaching, hastily closed the outer gate, but this was soon forced with natchets and bars of iron.
