San Francisco, May 17.—James McDonald arrived here yesterday on the steamer Harvard on route to Alberta, Canada, to meet Miss Harriet Woodside, his sweetheart of twenty-five years ago, who until a week ago believed him dead. McDonald sailed from the New England Coast in the whaling bark Fannie Griffith a quarter of a century ago on a voyage for his health. He expected to return and be married. The Fannie Griffith was wrecked. McDonald was believed to have been lost. After many hardships he returned to the New England village and found that Miss Woodside had married. He did not let his presence become known and returned to the sea. In following years he occasionally had news of his one-time fiance through a common friend. He learned last week in Los Angeles that her husband had died, and he left for Canada next day.

Conan Doyle Rebukes Shaw. New York, May 20.—A London cable says: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, in the Daily News this morning, administers a stinging rebuke to George Bernard Shaw for writing with "looseness and levity" about the loss of the Titanic. Sir Arthur says that in order to support his perverse thesis that there was no heroism shown, and that women were not allowed the first chance to escape, Mr. Shaw picks out a single boat, the smallest of all, and because there were ten men and two women in this boat, deems that there was any chivalry, although in the very next boat sixty-five out of seventy were women. The novelist then lashes the playwright for his reflections on the behaviour of the captain, who, he says, "though he may have made a terrible mistake, deliberately gave his life in reparation." He also resents the attempts of Mr. Shaw to defile the beautiful incident of the band playing "Nearer my God to Thee," on the ground that it was the result of orders to avert a panic, holding that if that is a fact, it does not detract from the band's wonderful bravery in going to death while inspiring others with courage to meet their fate.

Advertising Our Advertisers. END-OF-THE-MONTH SALES ARE IMPORTANT EVENTS IN EVERY STORE. These are the days when every merchant puts his house in order for the coming month. Putting his house in order is a costly process for him and a valuable opportunity for you. For the law of stores is that the stream of merchandise must be kept flowing pure and sweet and clean from bank to bank. The most dangerous thing with which any store has to contend is the piling up of odd lots and broken lines. Therefore the wise merchant will sell these accumulations at any cost. That is where the value of these End-of-the-Month Sales comes in for you. If your eyes are quick these next few days you can do a great deal of buying with a very small expenditure. Every woman, or some representative of every family, should be in the stores during the last few days of each month to take advantage of these natural clearances. It doesn't make any difference to you whether a merchant has six or sixty or six hundred pairs still left of a certain brand of shoes. But it makes all the difference in the world to him. All you want to know is, will any of the pairs that he is trying to clear out, fit you? You are not concerned whether a furniture or rug or house-necessary dealer has one or a hundred pieces of a certain stock so long as you can get the thing you want for less than you ought to pay. But every merchant in every line has got to clear these things out or his place will soon look like an old curiosity shop. This is the one bad, uneconomic feature of store-keeping which no one has fully overcome, and the sooner you, the public, learn to take full advantage of these forced sales, the richer you will be. Nearly every store in St. John's is offering these end-of-the-month inducements right now. Whether they say it in so many words or not the fact remains that they have these odd lots and they have to sell them. If you will watch the advertising pages of this paper for the next few days, if you will study them as a man would study a stock report, and know what you are going after, you will be amazed at the bargains you can secure and at the remarkable purchases you will be able to make. Every store should be busier at the end of this month than it was at the beginning. Turn to the advertising columns. Read the hundreds of good values that are being offered there and you will quickly see the reason why. McMurdo's Store News. TUESDAY, May 28, '12. Our so clerk asks us to announce that the Ice Cream season opens here on Monday next, June 3rd, when he will be prepared to serve Ice Cream, Ice Cream Sodas, Sundaes, etc., in good style. Discuss the Invitation. Yesterday afternoon Col. Rendell (C.L.B.), Col. Conroy, (C.E.C.), Major Hutchings, (Guards), and Lieut. Montgomery, representing the Highlanders, met to consider the invitation received for the sending of a squad of our brigade members to Toronto to take part in the Exhibition to be held in Toronto in August next. After discussing the matter at some length nothing definite was done. It is necessary for two commissioned officers to accompany the squad and at the present time it is difficult to choose men who are able to get off from work.

Train Eagles to Attack Aviators. Paris, May 22.—Some officers Nice, according to a French newspaper, have been training six eagles to attack aeroplanes and dirigible balloons. Although many attempts have been made to construct a gun for destroying aeroplanes, the project has not been solved as yet. These officers therefore, eagles as capable of attaining necessary speed and height in air, and began by habituating them to the noise of motors and fire. Then by fastening choice morsels on small balloons and on work representing an aeroplane, have trained the birds to throw themselves fiercely on such objects when they see they do their prey. The power of the eagle's beak claws it seems likely that an eagle could be counted on to wreck an aeroplane or tear open a dirigible, but the Gauls point out, a practice would be difficult to apply. This romance is in every way worthy of the author of the Rosary; wholesome, sweet, instinct with nobility, throbbing with life and with love. The confident wooing of the hero has in it so much of unspoiled human nature, and the hesitation of the heroine so much of tender foresight and solitude, that one cannot but wish that life might often bring one in contact with characters of such rare naturalness and beauty. Prof. Mallada. TELLS OF DESCENT INTO VESUVIUS. Naples, May 20.—"It is impossible to convey to another the weird impression made upon us by the surroundings," said Prof. Mallada last night in talking of his descending one thousand feet to the bottom of the crater of Mount Vesuvius. "Ghostly, fantastic shapes were piled up all about us. The hollow resonance of our voices was like the heavy booming of guns, and the distant rumbling sounded as if the earth was groaning in physical agony. "Twice my companion nearly fainted from the heat, which varied from 94 to 98 degrees Centigrade (200 to 208 degrees Fahrenheit), and the emanations of acids from the fumaroles or small holes, from which issue volcanic vapors, threatened to suffocate us. "After two hours' clambering we reached the bottom of the crater, which resembled a gigantic ploughed field. We remained there two hours, took numerous thermometric and barometric observations, and made a collection of mineral and other volcanic matter, from which we expect valuable scientific results. "We planted a red flag in the centre, which we found was just 320 yards (960 feet) from the level of the month. "The return climb was more difficult and perilous than the descent. Masses of rock and ashes fell around us as we toiled upward with the aid of ropes; and several times threatened to dash us to the bottom."
