The Brigus Exhibition.

The committee in charge of the Oh the East Brigus Exhibition spared not themselves in any way to make it the undoubted success that it has proved. The many exhibits from all classes of And be sorry he turned his coat. the district showed that the interest of the people had been aroused and the friendly rivalry brought forth exhibits of such merit as would do credit To the slogan of "Bond Can't Lose."
When the grand returns from the to any District in the Island. One lady of seventy-six years, sent a beautifully-worked piece of point lace that gained much praise, especially when it was considered how hard it was for young eyes even to do such work.

We read that the early Anglo-Saxons gained fame all over Europe for their skill in needlework, but that since the advent of the sewing ma-chine, needlework has degenerated a great deal. Happily for those who de-light in dainty, well-executed needlework there are many in Newfoundland that find pleasure and profit in this work and the display of work at Brigus was most creditable and compared favourably with any exhibition

Hooked-mats, artistically designed and well-worked; Kensington Art Embrodery, second to none; lace and drawn-work, eyelet-hole embroidery, made an exquisite showing and one over which a lady interested and experienced in such work, could pore

There were garments, neatly and wel-made that were made from the wool of the sheep that last year gamboled on the hills. All the variand weaving are done by the industrious women of Brigus and it all goes to prove that with a bit of land, some sheep, cows and hens and a willingness to work, one can be independent of the outside world.

The Riverside Woollen Mills had an excellent showing of local made blankets, and the butter, preserved fruit and home-made pickles formed an appetizing display that made one's mouth water.

The produce of the land was an interesting portion of the exhibit especially the seven different kinds of apples produced on Mackinson's farm. The live stock spoke for themselves and were not at all shy especially the 'roosters, who had lusty voices. The prize his was killed on the second day prize pig was killed on the second day of the exhibit and tipped the scales at

An exciting pony race formed a pleasant diversion on the road side.

Last, but not least, the freehand drawings and pen and ink sketches showed that the fine arts in this direction were not being lost sight of. Exhibitions like this are good in that the exhibits are not, as it were prepared for display but are the or-dinary products of the farm and the home, beng made well for their own sake, and not for the purpose of gain

Bishop March had been fired at while saying Mass at the Cathedral. People could scarcely believe it. On investigation I find the following particulars:— James Hare, a young man of about 26 years, who had been working in Sydney several years and who came home about two weeks ago, entered the Cathedral by the Sacristy door shortly after the Gospel at second Mass, and walked over to within a few feet of the altar at which His Lordship was celebrating Mass. He pointed a revolver directly at His Lordship was celebrating Mass.
