The Roll of Honour.

It has been a sad month for Newfoundland. The first shock fell almost wholly upon St. John's, but it was plainly but the forerunner of sorrow to the whole island. The long interval of silence that followed the receipt of the list of fallen officers could decide very few, while it added greatly, though unavoidably, to the anxiety of all. It thus increased in a measure the weight of the blow that has at last fallen, and great and universal is the sympathy that will go out to those whose worst fears have been confirmed.

A glance at the list will show how terribly severe the loss is. As might have been expected it is greatest in St. John's, more than a score of the names being from the city; but every district of the island contributes to the honourable roll. Some may have been better known than others and be more widely mourned, but all leave behind them empty places and achings hearts. These brave men were of the rank and file; where their officers led they did not hesitate to follow. They have received their promotion.

Words are little things at a time like this. To those bereaved we can only offer what sympathy we may. We shall not be censured if we offer it first and in the fullest measure to the mothers of the fallen lads. We have shared in the admiration of the world of the part that womankind have taken upon themselves to bear in this Armageddon, a part nobly greater than that which was expected of them. War is to them a strange and terrible thing; it demands the sacrifice of much that they hold dearest to a cause of which they only instinctively grasp the meaning. But the sacrifice itself has a depth and meaning to them which no man can ever fashion or appreciate. To bear it in silence, as all our mothers do, is a heroic feat no deed on the battle field surpasses. A mother's grief for her son is the saddest and the noblest gift of war.

Pozieres.

We have several times dwelt upon the importance of this position. Its capture by the British brings their operations a long way forward. It has been effected in unexpectedly speedy time since the first serious assault. The credit appears to belong chiefly to the Australians; Britain is certainly well represented by her colonies on the West front.

We have now established our line from Pozieres through Bazentin and Longueval, and completed the first stage of the advance upon Bapaume. The road thither is commanded by our guns, and the more important plateau as well. The British will now press on their offensive with renewed vigour and confidence. The importance and magnitude of the reduction of Pozieres may be gauged by the strength of the defence opposed by the Germans, who even withdrew troops from Verdun for the purpose.

Read with the reports from the other fronts, the news makes good reading. As did Erzerum, the stronghold of Erzerum has fallen almost before we were aware it was being attacked. The utmost we knew was that the Russians were advancing in force towards it. The brave announcement from Berlin that Turkish forces have been sent to the Danube will be received with some amusement in the light of the fall of Erzerum. It is true, they will probably be bundled back again post haste. The condition of Turkey is almost critical. Only the summer heat and Russia's concentration upon her European operations have saved Turkey from the Grand Duke, but he is under way again in earnest. Probably he will not extend his activities for the present further south in the region of

Charged With Receiving Stolen Goods

An East End tinsmith was summoned to court to-day by Detective Tobin charged with buying lead from three boys who were convicted a few days ago and sent to jail for stealing the material from the Chronicle building. The evidence showed that the defendant did not know the lead was stolen and that he paid five cents a pound for it. The charge against the defendant was dismissed.

St. Ivel Cheese, small tins, at ELLIS.

Granted a Commission

We hear from a most reliable source that William Grace, who left here as Quarter-Master Sergeant and senior non-commissioned officer with the last contingent on the Sicilian, has been appointed Sub-Lieutenant and will be officially gazetted shortly. He is the youngest son of our esteemed fellow townsman, Mr. John P. Grace. We extend our cordial congratulations in advance to the appointee and his parents.

We have excellent photographs of Capt. Father Nangle (N.F.L.D. Regiment) for sale at 50c., $1.00, $1.50. Outport orders receive every attention. J. C. PARSONS, Bank of Montreal Building, St. John's, Nfld.
