MAGIC BAKING POWDER

Contains No Alum

WHY EXPERIMENT?

Food scientists claim that the leavening is largely responsible for the flavor, texture and wholesomeness of your home baking. That on no other one ingredient does so much depend. It is important, therefore, to use a baking powder that you know possesses the necessary leavening qualities.

and is the only strictly high class baking powder in Canada selling at a moderate price. Its reputation is built on purity and highest quality. The only well known medium priced baking powder made in Canada that does not contain alum and that has all its ingredients plainly stated on the label.

REMORSE and REPENTANCE.

For Daisie's Sake

CHAPTER IV. FALSE.

"So Mr. Sherwood went away with my rash promise, and—yesterday I went out on my new wheel with my friend Annette, and, as I was not a very skilful cyclist, that awful accident happened. I might easily have been killed," shudderingly. "Well, Mr. Bain brought me home in his buggy, and when I revived from my fainting spell he was holding me in his arms, and—oh, I blush to tell you—but my heart rushed out to him! I realized I loved him wildly, madly, and could never love another. This morning he came—we could not meet formally—and we talked like old acquaintances. I hinted about his marrying you, but he denied it. I began to see that he cared for me"—blushing vividly—"and I quickly made up my mind to break with Mr. Sherwood, because he had deceived me intentionally, so as to leave me free to accept Dallas when he should propose. Oh, please don't look as though you think me the vainest girl on earth! Indeed, I am not! And so, all at once, before I expected it, Dallas was impudently asking me to marry him, and I accepted, meaning, of course, to tell him presently all about that other affair, and that I should break with Mr. Sherwood immediately; but in five minutes, before I had confessed to him, you came, and—spoiled—everything!" concluded Daisie, with a sob of despair.

Could Not Sleep

Mr. Earnest Clark, Police Officer, 338 King St., Kingston, Ont., writes:

"For three years I suffered from nervousness and sleeplessness. I believe my condition was brought about by overwork. I had frequent headaches, neuralgic pains and twitching of nerves and muscles. I had indigestion, was short of breath and easily tired. I commenced a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and seven boxes of this medicine cured me of all my symptoms. I am now feeling one hundred per cent. better than I was, and have to thank Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for the good health I am now enjoying."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, $ for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Then she caught her breath, and waited; but Mrs. Fleming said never a word, only looked cold and incredulous.

Daisie rallied her courage, and persevered humbly:

"You see how it was, Mrs. Fleming, don't you? I was weak, but not wicked. As for flirting, I never thought of it. I exorcise it as much as you do, and I am very sorry I ever listened to your cousin. But you must see that he was to blame. Why did he try to prejudice me against the man I loved? He might have guessed I would find it out some time."

Mrs. Fleming found her voice, and said huskily, trying to remedy Royall's defeat and her own:

"You misjudge my cousin. He thought I was engaged to Mr. Bain because he knew he loved me, and I was very friendly with him. But when he proposed I refused him, because I couldn't love a stranger I knew nothing about. It was simply through spite he turned to you, but he is gone now in anger, so my advice to you is to keep your promise to Royall, and let him go."

"Could you advise me to act so base-ly? No, I can never marry Mr. Sherwood now. When he comes I want you to tell him all that happened here today, and that I set him free."

"Indeed, I shall tell him nothing of the kind! I would not give him such pain as to tell him the girl he loves is a cruel little coquette. Think better of it, Daisie Bell, and marry Royall, who is so rich, and can give you a palace for a home and diamonds a princess might envy. He is of a sweet, sunny disposition, too, and will make you far happier than Dallas Bain, who is sullen, violent, and jealous. Besides, he is gone away, and you will never see him again, so I will keep your secret of this morning, and Royall need never know it," coaxed the little widow.

CHAPTER VI.

"I CANNOT GIVE UP MY LOVE."

But all her pleadings could not move Daisie from her resolve to tell Royall everything and break her engagement. She persisted in it, crying pleadingly:

"Oh, if you really want to do me a kindness, you must help me with Dallas. He is at your house, and you will see him when you go back. Won't you tell him how it all came about, that I love only him, and ask him to forgive me and come back to me again?"

She did not know that she was pleading to a woman who loved Dallas so madly that she would rather have seen him dead than married to another; but somehow she could not believe the story that he had proposed to Lottie Fleming and been refused. Daisie believed that any woman would be glad to accept such a splendid lover. She told herself that the artful young widow was just trying to shield her cousin and to further his cause.

Mrs. Fleming said decisively: "I decline to speak to Dallas Bain on this subject, or to work against my cousin's interests in any way, and I believe that when you come to your sober senses, girl, you will be glad enough to keep this affair a secret and marry Royall, after all."

So saying, she swept from the room and rustled out to her carriage, nodding a careless greeting to Annette Janowitz, who was just entering the gate, and who went in the open doors

Daisie sobbing with hysterical grief on her sofa.

"Oh, my poor dear, is your foot so bad?" queried she, with quick sympathy; and presently she drew from her friend the story of the morning's happenings.

"Oh, Annette, I cannot give him up! I love him so dearly! You will help me to win him back, won't you, dear?" "Indeed, I will, if you will only tell me what I can do for you," responded Annette, the tears of sympathy shining in her bright dark eyes.

Daisie thought a few moments, very seriously, and then announced her plan: "Write him a friendly note, Annette, asking him to call at your house this evening and see you about a very particular matter. Don't mention my name, or, in his first resentment, he might refuse to come."

Annette nodded her approval, and said: "And when he arrives I must explain your affair to him, and beg him to forgive you, and come and see you?"

"If you will be so kind, dear Annette," murmured Daisie, whose shining eyes were dried now in the sunshine of hope.

Annette went to the writing desk, and penned a dainty little note, inviting Dallas Bain to call on her that evening, as she wished to consult him about his taking part in some private theatricals they were planning for a village charity.

"I have heard that he is a splendid amateur actor, so he will not refuse," she said gleefully. "And I can tell him afterwards that it was just a ruse to get him to my house to plead your cause. Depend upon it, he will be overjoyed to learn that you intend to throw over Royall Sherwood for his sake," she added encouragingly.

"Now, Annette, please run out to the post office at the corner, and post it quickly, so that he will not fail to get it this afternoon," cried Daisie, with feverish impatience.

Annette went as requested, and when she returned she said joyously: "Oh, Daisie, I wish you were as happy as I am! I am engaged, you know, and only think—I had a letter from my dear boy this morning, saying that he is coming to see me tomorrow. He is a commercial traveler, you know, and just perfectly magificent! The only drawback is that he's just horribly jealous, and does not permit me to look at any other man."

"Well, you need not want to, if you love him. I would not care if there were not another man in the world to look at but Dallas!" cried Daisie tenderly.

"Oh, I dare say you may be tired of looking at him some day when you are married to him!" laughed Annette; but she could not persuade Daisie of it. She was in love in the most romantic fashion.

While the girls laid their innocent plans for calling back Daisie's lover, Mrs. Fleming rode back to Sea View with fury in her heart—the fury of "a woman scorned."

Keen and bitter had been her humiliation when Daisie had said so innocently:

"He laughed at the idea of marrying you!"

Her last hope of winning him was gone now, and jealous anger entered her heart and drove out the sweet guest, Love.

She hated and envied Daisie Bell with a hatred beyond all telling.

"She took him away from me—came between us with her dazzling face—I might still have won him if they had not met. Very well, I will punish them both most bitterly," she vowed. "As for marrying, they never shall, if a woman's wit can prevent it."

As soon as she entered the house, she ascertained that Dallas Bain had not yet returned.

Her young-lady guests were down at the beach, and she went to her room to rest and plot how to keep the lovers apart for the future.

"I dare say she wrote to him as soon as I came away, explaining everything, and begging him to come back to her," she thought astutely. "I must make sure of getting that letter."

And as the village was so small that the letter-carrier service was not yet established, she presently sent her maid, Letty, to the post office, saying:

"Bring everything that is in the Sea View box straight to me, Letty, before you let any one else see it. My cousin, Mr. Sherwood, wanted me to get out of it some private mail for him."

Letty Green returned in an hour with a budget of letters, books, and papers for her mistress and her guests; but she had made sure, with feminine curiosity, first, that there was nothing for Royall Sherwood; also, that there was one very dainty-looking perfumed letter for Dallas Bain, bearing the town postmark, Gull Beach.

This was what Mrs. Fleming expected, and as soon as the maid's back was turned she opened and read it, laughing to herself:

"She has planned with Annette to get him back; but Dallas Bain will never see this letter, and the two young misses will be disappointed this evening."

CHAPTER VII.

TEMPTED TO END IT ALL.

Words are too weak to describe the feelings of Dallas Bain as he rushed with frenzied haste from the presence of the beautiful girl so lately worshipped as the queen of her sex, only to learn that she was the most heartless coquette in the world.

Never was there such a rapid transition from rapturous joy to the depths of misery—misery and anger, for now could any prodd man bear with equanimity to be made a fool of, as Daisie Bell had just fooled him?

To be engaged only two days to Royall Sherwood, although of their intimacy he had had no inkling until now, and then to accept another's suit with the most complacent smile and the sweet blush, pretending a tenderness she, of course, did not feel—it was the most shocking thing he ever had heard of. He loathed, execrated himself for falling so easily into her wiles.

He was strong, passionate, and proud, and only twenty-five—this hero of ours—who could blame him for the pride and resentment that fired his blood as he rushed from the scene of his humiliation, not heeding the piteous cry of woe with which Daisie sought to recall him to her side?

He strode down the village street in hot haste, looking neither to the right nor left until he reached the beach, where he sought a secluded spot by the sea, where none could intrude upon his rocky retreat, and flung himself down to brood over his cruel defeat in love.

AN ACT TO PROVIDE FOR THE STANDARDIZATION OF CODFISH!

WHEREAS it is essential in the interests of the Colony that the methods of preparing and exporting codfish which are at present in use should be regulated and improved;

Be it enacted by the Governor, the Legislative Council and House of Assembly, in Legislative Session convened, as follows:—

- There shall be a Commission to be appointed by His Excellency the Governor-in-Council, which shall be known as the Codfish Standardization Commission.
- The said Commission shall consist of not less than five or more than eleven persons, of whom the Minister of Marine and Fisheries shall be one, ex officio, and shall be the Chairman.
- It shall be the duty of the said Commission to prepare and draft rules and regulations for the improvement of the manner in which salt codfish (hereinafter called codfish) is prepared for sale and transported, and in particular governing the following matters, that is to say:—
 - The manner of catching, splitting, cleaning, salting, drying, curing, pickling and preparing fish for sale and export; and generally all and singular the operations involved in the preparation of the production of the finished article.
 - The culling, selecting, assorting, standardizing, and determination of the different grades or varieties of fish, with a view to the establishment of grades thereof in the local and foreign markets and to the ensuring, so far as possible, of suitability for the several markets.
 - The stowage, storage, packing, inspection, and weighing of fish and marketing of packages.
 - The lading, stowage, protection, unloading, covering, and all other matters connected with the carriage and conveyance of fish whether within this Colony or from this Colony to other countries, and whether in ships, vehicles, or any other modes of conveyance.
 - The establishments of standards of size, type, condition, grade and quality of fish, and the means of determining and enforcing the same.
 - The fixing of differences between the prices of different sizes, types, conditions, grades, and qualities in the local markets, and the provision of methods for accurately determining such sizes, types, conditions, grades and qualities.
 - The fixing of penalties for the breach of any of the rules and regulations to be made as aforesaid. Specific penalties shall be fixed for each particular rule and regulation.
- All such rules and regulations shall be laid before His Excellency the Governor-in-Council for approval, and if when so approved and published in the Royal Gazette shall at the expiration of 15 days from the date of the Proclamation have the force and effect of Law if incorporated in this Act.
- This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Fish Standardization Act, 1920."
