Not What You Earn But What You Save

In the measure of your success, small earnings power is often more than balanced by a habit of saving. In the struggle for independence, the man who saves—even a little—is far ahead of the better-paid man who saves nothing.

Be Independent

Determining to save a little steadily, it demands far less effort than you may imagine. And the accumulation of small savings increases your savings more rapidly than perhaps you have thought. You can open an account in this old-established, strong, safe institution with one dollar or more.

DAILY MENU

BREAKFAST.
Cereal, Bacon and Eggs, Coffee, Toast.

LUNCHEON.
Tomato and Cucumber Salad, Cup Custard, Cocoa.

DINNER.
Chicken Broth, Veal Chops, With Asparagus Sauce, Potatoes, Peas, Carrot Fudding, Hard Sauce, Ginger Ale Mini Punch.

Veal Chops With Asparagus Sauce.—But enough asparagus to make one cupful when it is strained, put one tablespoon of butter over the fire; when it bubbles add one tablespoon of flour and stir until smooth. Add one tablespoon of minced mint and half a cup each of milk and asparagus liquor and stir until it boils smooth. Add salt, pepper and the preserved pulp; stir well and serve with nicely browned veal chops.

USE OF POWDER.
It is sometimes necessary to powder the face, but powder should be applied lightly and artistically in order to impart to the skin the velvety softness of the peach.

A face powdered like a clown's is ridiculous and as unbecoming as vulgar. Powder on the face should be imperceptible, and if used with discretion is not to be condemned.

Take up but a small quantity of powder on the palm of your hand, and rub it over the face. Care should be taken not to powder the eyebrows, and the lips must be carefully wiped to remove any powder which may have fallen. The whole face, except the eyes, the eyebrows, and the lips, should receive a touch of the powder.

A NECKTIE PARTY FOR THE PORCH.
A housekeeper who had carefully laid aside the fine silk cravates discarded by the "new folks" of the household, betwixt herself of using them for one of the old-fashioned patchwork quilts, which, when nicely done, are always so effective.

The more pondered the more the idea suggested as a pleasant one for a porch party, and the porch being a spacious one a number of informal invitations were accordingly sent out.

The ladies were invited to spend the afternoon and were requested to come, bringing with them "their" favorite patterns for quilting squares.

In advance of the gathering the cravates were carefully ripped, brushed, and any spots found were removed with naptha.

The hostess received her guests attired in an old-fashioned basque gown with her cravates in the quantity of "port" style of the seventies and a white handkerchief.

While the ladies sat and sewed, turning over leaves in reading selected chapters from novels of half a century ago, while all joined in the chorus of favorite old songs.

Refreshments with sponge cake and fruit were passed as refreshments, as these good things seemed chronologically more in keeping with the event.

STUFFED PRUNES.
A most delightful addition to the usual butter "spread" served at card parties is the stuffed prune. We have had scores of ladies and gentlemen select the Washington prunes filled with smaller prunes, but what I have referred to here is the homemade variety. The dried prunes are soaked in water for twenty-four hours, and then stuffed with a mixture of raisins and sugar.

What to Serve.
Dear Miss Grey: Would you kindly suggest what I may serve as a light lunch to a party of four or six?

A. Meat sandwiches, but no fruit salad, dessert and coffee.

THE LONDON ADVERTISER.

The three and twenty stacks of good hay which should have been turned into beef at thirty or forty dollars a head, and the three and twenty stacks of red hearts of fire, and in the white day-light were nothing but gray spots on the meadow. They had been baked up as clean as the mist was by the sun, and left little more trace than the Indians who had ignited them.

These had vanished utterly. Two spots of freest earth, outside the corral, might suggest the recent presence of the Chippewas to those who knew what lay below, but these and the charred railings where the stacks had stood were all the traces that remained.

From the back to the black timber of the inclosing hills there was no sign of a camp fire, no hint of a man's presence, and one by one the scouts sent out from the ranch came back with the same story. The Indians had been about a score in number, and were not, neither had they left any trail to show which way they had gone.

The most experienced among the trackers guessed that they had scattered, and it was impossible to say where they would reunite. But Jim would be back, said the men, and then they could make up their minds what to do.

But Jim did not come. Though they waited for him from hour to hour, though even an ordinary rider in ordinary harness might have been back before the second night fell, the dark came again, and with it no Jim Conble.

Neither did morning bring him, and it was not until late afternoon on the fourth day that he came back, and then they could make up their minds what to do.

Kitty, whose impatience was devouring her, did not bring him, and it was not until late afternoon on the fourth day that he came back, and then they could make up their minds what to do.

French Landlords Ask Big Prices of Families With Children.

London, June 29.—Life in Paris just now presents some humorous sides to the impartial foreigner. To begin with there was the census, which in France is a source of irritation to almost every body. Men as well as women disliked questions as to their age and occupation, and in defiance of the threats of heavy penalties fill in the forms with considerable sarcasm, but a remarkably slack adherence to the truth.
