The British Revolution.

The progress of domestic reform will not be materially delayed in England, and the conservative cause will be passed by both houses and the redistribution bill is very nearly through all its stages.

Until the event takes place, the revolution in British politics that must be wrought by these two measures. It is a prevailing estimate that the franchise bill will bring in about two million voters who have hitherto been excluded.

Now, the conservative leaders must know all this, and they must see they have considered the question which will now be the uppermost one in many minds.

A general election must take place within some six or eight months; that is, upon, on all hands. In this election the "millions of new voters will take part, and, can they be expected to vote for Tory candidates? What possible policy can the Tory leaders have to offer, upon which they may reasonably expect to carry the popular vote?

The Canadian opposition, led by Mr. Blake, has waited years for a policy, but as yet none is forthcoming. No such long time will be allowed to the conservative leaders in England to make up their minds.

Cholera Coming. Thus early in the year cholera has reappeared in the south of Europe; recent rumors to this effect are now fully confirmed. That it will spread to the west of Europe, and then to America, is to be expected.

Newspapers. One evidence of Toronto's enterprise is to be found in her newspapers. In a city of 100,000 inhabitants we have seven perfect newspaper presses, a number not equalled by any city on the continent of double the population.

column exactly; each publisher, through prejudice or ignorance, fails on his own account of measurement; and as a consequence enough money is thrown away every year to buy some of them brick houses.

The Monopolies and Monopoliats Getting. There is no more patent fact-to-day than that the monopolies and monopoliats are getting more and more numerous.

That Mr. Gladstone is a shrewd friend of Ireland seems to me to be beyond question. No man but one, with his phenomenal assiduity for work, unparalleled skill in piloting measures through parliament, and intense sympathy with the people, could have done what he has done for Ireland during his short time of office.

Editorial World: The refusal of the employers to consider the request of the labor class that wages be paid weekly is not only unjust in principle but offensive in its incident.

It is clear, then, that in the interests of the laborer he ought to be paid what he has earned, and to claim that made by the laborer is right and his convenience and self interest.

Editorial World: The meeting of cattlemen and drovers held at the Bull's Head last Tuesday evening has the appearance of being a set-up job on the part of a few interested parties.

The Heated Police. Editor World: I notice in your issue of the 12th a letter from a retired officer of the H. M. service, on the subject of the mounted police.

The amendments made by the house of lords in the British redistribution bill are to be discussed in the commons to-day. They will probably be "put through" without much loss of time.

It is attempting to forecast what will happen in the course of the political revolution upon which England has just entered, one contingency should not be left out.

struction of the liberal party as well as a change in conservative policy. We are on the eve of great events.

Editorial World: Passing over points on which we differ with respect to Mr. Gladstone's record as a statesman—and I am prepared to defend the assertion that he is one of the greatest England has ever produced—allow me to explain the apparent paradox in my statement that the strength of his position in the Irish question. You are quite right in saying that Ireland has given the Gladstone government a great deal of trouble, and that the state of that unfortunate country has been one of the chief causes, though it is not the immediate occasion, of his resignation.

two companies his action in ordering the movements was an uncharacteristic one. He is not a man who has been guilty of a great breach of discipline and is liable to charge.

The respondent of the St. Paul Pioneer-Press while at Prince Albert endeavored to account for the delay in the coming of Gen. Middleton's assistance at Banquo. The delay was not due to any fault of the Col. and the officers of the police force but to the delay in the coming of Gen. Middleton's assistance.
