

ORIGINAL STORY

"Who are you?" the weak voice broke forth gathering strength as it went on, "not the bonnie lady I worshipped when my heart was young. Her eyes were soft and smiling, and her voice was like the music of the rippling water. None ever guessed I dared to love her—the bonnie lady, the master's daughter, I'm dying now when the day dawns I shall be away—beyond—I thought to look upon her sweet face as I go, an' listen to the music of her voice, an' maybe take her hand in mine, but it's all an idle dream—vanished and gone. Nay! nay! You'll go your way an' forgive the trouble I've wrought you, with my wandering foolish fancy. It's all an idle dream—vanished an' gone—a foolish dream—vanished an' gone—forever!"

"Marget! Marget! My own dear wife! come to me, put your hand in mine. You'll hide with me close to the dark Valley—an', then—his rod and staff, they'll comfort me. You'll be lonely, Marget, dear, but I'll be waitin' for ye in the 'Father's house.' I'll be waitin' an' watchin' for your comin' an' meet ye at the peary gates, an' there'll be no more partin'. Kiss me, dear, an' say 'Our Father' once more. Our Father, Marget—hallowed ay—hallowed be His name!"

About the old farm house the night and the storm died away, the wind sank to a gentle lullaby. The round red sun rose up and flung wide his splendour for the white alluvial world that lay with glistening jewels on its bosom, while Marget weeping, knelt beside her dead and murmured "Father, I thank Thee."

WANTED TO SEE HOW RIFLE WORKED; WILL DIE.

Ware, Mass., Dec. 19—While trying his brother's rifle, "to see how it worked," today, Louis Morin, eight years of age, accidentally shot himself, and died a few minutes later. Alfred Morin, the older brother, had just received the rifle, for which he had been saving up his money for a long time, and had forbidden Louis to touch it. When his brother was absent from the house, this afternoon, however, Louis secured the weapon and went out behind the barn to try it. He fired one shot which entered his right side, passing through the chest and landing near the shoulder blade. He was in a dying condition when found. The medical examination pronounced it an accident. Just how it happened is unexplained. The boys were sons of Edward Morin, a milk dealer, residing on a farm some distance from the village.

THE APPLE SCAB AND ITS CONTROL

In 1909 at Cornell, scab on Greenings, was reduced from forty-two per cent to 3.6 per cent, by lime sulphur, and 1.30 to 3 per cent, by Bordeaux. In 1910, it was reduced from 18 to 11 per cent, on Baldwin by lime sulphur and to 18 per cent by Bordeaux. In one orchard and to 14 and 17 per cent, respectively, in another. On Greenings it was reduced from 70 per cent to 10 per cent by lime sulphur and to 18 per cent by Bordeaux. The Rubbers had 94 per cent on the unsprayed and 3 per cent, on the lime sulphur trees. There were no Bordeaux trees of this variety. Another Greening orchard gave 63 per cent, on trees sprayed with lime sulphur, and 6.6 per cent on the Bordeaux plot.

Summarizing these results, we have a record of three years for Bordeaux in Oregon, two years for Scott in Virginia and Arkansas, not including the present season, and two years of our work at Cornell. Aside from this experimental work, a few growers made the venture and used lime sulphur as a summer spray in 1909, and a very large number in 1910. Some conflicting results are reported, as would be expected. The conclusions to be drawn from the sum of all this work however, is that lime sulphur solution properly prepared and used, may be successfully substituted for Bordeaux mixture as a summer spray for apples. Its chief advantage being that it largely if not entirely avoids the danger of russeting of the fruit which so often follows the use of Bordeaux, and that aside from russeting, the fruit has a decidedly finer finish where lime sulphur is used. It is well known that Bordeaux injury is less likely to occur when wet weather follows soon after the application. With lime sulphur spray, we seem to be less at the mercy of weather conditions. The chemical properties of the two fungicides are entirely different. In properly made Bordeaux the copper which is doubtless the caustic or burning ingredient, is in the insoluble, or harmless form when applied, and does not cause injury until it has been chemically changed by exposure to certain weather conditions. In case of lime sulphur, the soluble sulphur which is doubtless the caustic ingredient, is applied in the soluble form and soon changes to an insoluble. We are convinced then that whatever injury caused by lime sulphur, is caused at once, while the spray is drying on the tree. The weather following the application would therefore, be expected to have little or no influence on the amount of injury in the case of lime sulphur. In fact we have sprayed with lime sulphur in all kinds of weather, and from carefully kept notes, have been unable to correlate the amount of injury, with any particular weather conditions. We are convinced however, that the weather conditions of the season previous to the application, may have an influence in producing a foliage that is more or less susceptible to injury. We have noted that in general apple foliage seemed to be more easily burned by lime sulphur in 1910, than in 1909 in New York State. This we believe to be partly due to the fact that the wet spring of 1910 was more favorable to fungus infection which as we have described, made the leaves more susceptible to spray injury. It is also quite possible as claimed by Prof. Cordley, that the season affects the leaf physiologically to make it more or less susceptible to spray injury.

It is therefore true that while there seems to be little danger of fruit injury from lime sulphur, we do have the problem of foliage injury to contend with. Many growers have had slight, and a few, quite objectionable injury. In most cases this occurs all at once, and the trees soon recuperate. What we want to know then is, what precautions can be taken to avoid the danger of an objectionable amount of foliage injury. Most cases we find have been traceable to one or both of two cases. In many cases, a microscopic examination would reveal the fact that the scab fungus was present in almost every burned spot, and in many cases the trees or certain branches had been too heavily drenched. Over drenching of the foliage is very likely to cause injury some seasons. The spray should be thoroughly applied or evenly distributed so as to coat all parts; remembering that the spray only protects those buds that are actually coated. On the other hand, holding the nozzle still in one place so long as to over-drench that part of the tree, should be avoided. We have been able in this way to spray many acres of orchard, satisfactorily controlling scab and codling moth and retaining as healthy a foliage as could be desired. A slight spotting of some leaves occurred soon after the application, but this could hardly be detected a few weeks later.

AMAR GREENWOOD'S SCOP.

How British M.P. Made a Bit of Money on the Side.

Regarding stories of great newspaper hoax, which have recently appeared in the Canadian papers, another Canadian, who is entitled to rank in the honor-roll as a former Toronto man, Hamar Greenwood, of whose reverse at the polls in York during the late British elections many Canadians learned with sincere regret. In his early campaigning tours in England, he had done considerable journalistic work. Three or four years ago he was one of a party of English M.P.'s who, under the protection of Sir Alfred Jones, visited Jamaica to study conditions on the island. During their sojourn a large portion of Kingston, the capital city, was destroyed by an earthquake. Mr. Greenwood had left his hotel for a short walk from which he was returning when the cataclysm occurred and the building was shattered. So destructive was the shock that many lives were lost and property damaged to the extent of millions of dollars. It did not take Hamar Greenwood long to get a newspaper article on the terrible catastrophe, but the perplexing problem was how to forward a long telegraphic message to the cable line connecting Jamaica with the outside world had been sundered by the quake. Resources and tact must be resorted to. He had covered important matters for the London Daily Mail, and he could only get the news through exclusively to that paper would mean many shillings long to the editor of the Daily Mail, and hence to him. Correspondents of all the leading American and European dailies were on the island, and to scoop them was the all-important question, especially as communication of all kinds had been cut off. Greenwood, however, kept a cool head and knew how to be diplomatic. In the harbor was a U. S. warship and near by a swift cutter. The M.P. for York hastily pencilled a three-hundred word report of the disaster, and going aboard the man-of-war he addressed the commander in official capacities, that if he was representative of the Imperial Government he must get an important despatch through to the War Office, and that was then Under-Secretary of State.

"Have this conveyed to the nearest cable station at once," requested the Under-Secretary, "and I will be glad to sign the report." The officer offered no serious objection, and soon the message was being conveyed to the nearest cable station. By the speedy cutter, here, the message was sent to the Home Office by private instruction, found its way to the London Daily Mail, which thus had the first news of the calamity—hours ahead of any of its contemporaries. Mr. Greenwood, who was not in regular newspaper work, being a full-fledged barrister, did not suffer from financial stringency, and on his return to London he found a Harmsworth check awaiting him, and he was not a moment behind in repaying it. He was a member of the House of Commons, and he was not a moment behind in repaying it. He was a member of the House of Commons, and he was not a moment behind in repaying it.

THE DANGERS OF ARSENIC.

"You no doubt have observed the ghly white complexion of some women who are suffering from their lives for that beautiful skin by the use of arsenic," said D. V. Duval, a chemist of Manchester, Eng. "Arsenic, as science has long told us, is an accumulative poison. When one takes it in three or four days, it is effective in the treatment of the skin, but it does not realize how much of it will accumulate in his system in the course of four or five years. "Being an accumulative poison, it often takes that length of time to see the results of the drug. Then the user may complain of not being able to control his fingers or toes. Subsequently he loses control of his hands and arms. Arsenical poisoning is the result.

Long Distance Talkers.

Mr. Fisher, who holds the Parliamentary record for lengthy speeches, although he has close competitors for this doubtful honor in his colleagues, Messrs. King and Lemieux, must look straight away talk race was seriously challenged recently by Mr. George H. Bradbury, the member for Selkirk, who occupied four hours and a quarter of the time of the House in explaining the circumstances surrounding the "filing of 21,000 acres of land from the St. Peter's Reserve Indians by an average of $5 an acre; the Indian agent who was supposed to look after the wards of the Government helping the thing along by himself buying some of the lands thus obtained." It costs no less than $21 to run Parliament for a minute, so Mr. Bradbury's speech was expensive, costing $5,295. If there was some odometer system which would tax each member so much on his indemnity for these long trials of the patience of the House, Parliament would not find it necessary to sit for six months in the year.

A Blind Campaigner.

Mr. J. B. Mulloy, the young Canadian student who went to the South African war to fight for the Empire, and returned totally blind as a result of being shot in the face, was the subject of a column in a recent London paper. Mr. Mulloy is one of the Imperial pioneers, representing the different overseas dominions, who are to talk to the people at home about the Empire and its needs. The Imperial Pioneers want to gather together in one body the men in Britain who are of no particular party, and who will try to direct their fellow-countrymen towards an imperial policy. Preference is, of course, one of the points on which they feel strongly.

LOUIS OF BATTENBERG.

May's Probable Successor is Well-Known and Popular in Canada.

Reports from England state that Admiral Sir W. H. May, one of the most eminent officers of the British navy will relinquish his post as chief in command of the Home Fleet, and that his successor will probably be a sailor agreeably known to Canadians, Prince Louis of Battenberg. He has indeed been personally known to Canadians for more than a generation. As a young man in the seventies being then a younger son of the late King, he was through his relationship to the royal family. Indeed it is not too much to say that the reverse has been his lot. He has possessed another and less German name, there is no doubt that he would have been First Sea Lord of the Admiralty before-to-day. Years ago he has been in command of the fleet in every way owing to the German and Austrian surroundings his name. If he succeeds Admiral Sir W. H. May in the Home Fleet there will be no doubt he will be as much of a success as he has been as a matter of fact the prince is thoroughly British in his sentiments and aspirations, otherwise he would have accepted the throne of Bulgaria when it was offered to him several years ago. He is one of the most popular men in the royal navy to-day. Not only is he noted for the possession of all these kindlinesses of heart and tender delicacies of spirit, but he is also noted for his sense of justice and his natural sense of justice is so true, and his temper is so full a consideration of all extenuating circumstances, that if he were a man of the law he would be a first-class judge. He has to be done that is all the men want to know. And it has always been so with him. He is a man of the law, and he is a man of the law. He is a man of the law, and he is a man of the law.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES PAIN

Electric Beans Are a Natural Remedy for Nerve, Stomach and Liver Disorders.

Once upon a time disease was thought to be due to direct influence of evil spirit and magic was invoked to cast it out.

Science has taught us wisdom. The evil spirits still exist we call them "Disease Germs," and they must also be cast out. Once lodged in the stomach or intestines biliousness with its aches and pains, or in fact seventy-five per cent of the ills that affect the human race, is the result.

Electric Beans are the approved remedy for driving out disease germs. Their action is quick and thorough. They clear the intestines, rouse the torpid liver, give new life, stimulate mucous membranes to healthy action and cleanse and invigorate the whole digestive tract. Be prepared for emergencies by always keeping a box in the home.

See our booklet of remarkable, true, testimonials. Test this remedy at our risk, if it is not satisfactory we will cheerfully refund the money paid for it.
