

SOCIAL RANK IN ENGLAND.

An action for breach of promise has just been tried in Dublin. The fair plaintiff was the daughter of a dressmaker, who claimed to be a "lady." On her cross-examination she was asked why she considered herself higher in rank than any young woman employed in a bonnet shop. "Do you think yourself higher than the young women in Forest's or Manning's, for instance?"—two fashionable shops. The young lady's answer is decisive. "Most certainly; I cannot cut out a dress; have never made up my own bonnets. So little do I know of millinery that the bonnet on my head was made for me." This is a new sort of patent of gentility, incapacity to make a bonnet or cut out any sort of a garment. A young lady's mother makes and sells bonnets; the young lady herself lives on the money paid for the bonnets, but she takes rank above her mamma by virtue of the proud fact that she does not know how to make anything. I think this decidedly better than the contest for gentility between the Higgs family and the Diggs family, recorded by Thackeray, in which the scale finally turned by the grandeur of a trip in the steamer to Margate and the ostentatious purchase of a pint of shrimps.

PASTE THIS IN YOUR HAT.

Pay your debts as soon as you get the money in your pocket. Do without what you don't need. Speak your mind when necessary. Hold your tongue when prudent. Speak to a friend in a steady coat. If you can't lend a friend money, tell him why. If you don't want to, do the same. Cut acquaintances who lack principle. Bear with infirmities, but not vices. Respect honesty, despise duplicity. Wear your old clothes till you can pay for new ones. Aim at comfort and propriety, not fashion. Acknowledge your ignorance, and don't pretend knowledge you haven't got. Entertain your friends, but never beyond your means.

With all your commiseration for distress, join firmness of mind. Interest yourself in general happiness, feel for all that is human, but suffer not your peace to be disturbed by what is beyond the sphere of your influence, or beyond your power to remedy.

ELEGANCE IN TASTE.—Every one must have remarked the difference in the furnishing of a bachelor's house, and one where a lady presides; the thousand little elegancies of the latter, though nothing in themselves, adding, like ciphers, prodigiously to the value of the solid articles they are appended to.
