

before the committee beside the letter of John Rochester, and came to the conclusion that the letter was a fair answer in defence of John E. Rochester's memory to plaintiff's statements. The finding of the jury upon the point which both parties appeared to have regarded as decisive of their rights, must be treated as final, there being no suggestion that the point in question was unfairly submitted to them.

Motion dismissed without costs.

---