

Estimates

I like the use every Remembrance Day of the words with which the minister closed his statement when he said, "We will remember them." I liked the way in which the hon. member for Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe underlined that expression. We have tried to do so in what we have done for our veterans and their families. We can be proud of what has been achieved, but much remains to be done. I hope that even yet we will find ways to make life better for those who suffered disabilities. I hope that in this House we shall soon do something the Standing Committee on Veterans Affairs has recommended on a number of occasions, namely, improve the pension position of the widows of all of Canada's war veterans.

Sir, we are honoured to join in this moment of recognition of the fact that tomorrow across Canada all Canadians will remember those who died.

[Translation]

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, together with the preceding speakers, including the minister, I want to point out that tomorrow is Remembrance Day. As I already told the House, these men died for their country. Those who are still with us are the living mementoes of these unfortunate wars. May the surviving veterans, disabled or not, have the sympathetic ear of the Minister of Veterans Affairs (M. MacDonald) and particularly get quick responses, in keeping with the great sacrifices they made for their fellow countrymen.
