What a War Between Nicaragus and Costa Rica May Develop.

Washington, March 1.-In the event of a war between Nicaragua and Costa Rica, it is said that the alliance known as the Greater Republic would give to Nicaragua the armed strength of Sal-vador and Honduras. The Nicaraguan army is estimated at about 8,000 men. Salvador has not more than 3,000 soldiers, but Honduras has the best drilled and equipped force in Central America, numbering 50,000 men. Against these the Costa Rican army of about 5,000 seems insignificant, but in the present calculations it is thought that Guatemala would cast her influence with Costa Rica. Guatemala has an army of about 50,000. In this event the forces would be about evenly matched, with Nicaragua, Honduras and Salvador arrayed against Guatemala and Costa

The people are said to have stood up In a body and shouted "No!" "If, then," said he, "the United States fails to annex the islands, will you sup-port the present government?" Again the populace answered in the negative. "I know certainly," continued Cluff, according to the story, "that your queen can never be restored. If you do not want annexation to the United States, or will not support the present govern-ment, what, then, do you want?" To a man, the story goes, the natives shouted: "Give us annexation to Eng-

the End of a Car.

[Chicago Record.] Mr. Griffitts, of the Burlington, has a little piece of recent history which he relates with considerable feeling. The Burlington reinstated the swift World's Fair flyer, No. 1, a few days ago after a long discontinuance, and the question of the speed she would be able to maintain was uppermost in the minds of the railroad people. By the schedule No. 1 had to be fleet of motion, leaving Chicago at 10 o'clock in the morning, reaching Omaha at 11:50 that night, and running into Denver at 1:30 the afternoon of the next day.

A man who was aware of the keen interest Mr. Griffitts had taken in the initial trip met the railroad personage a few days after the resumption. "Well," he said, in greeting, "did she go fast? Keep up to her card time?" "Keep up?" witheringly. "I should by so. Why, she—but say, what's the use of mentioning figures? Comparisons are what count. Circumstances, you know. Incidents. Those give you the best idea. I'll just mention one thing that happened in connection with the run. You know there's a stretch of about twenty miles from Plattsmouth into Omaha after we cross the bridge into Nebraska? Well-and understand this is an official report taken from the yardmaster at Omaha-there was a tramp waiting at the end of the bridge on the Nebraska side, hoping to ride from there into Omaha on the platform of the baggage car. But he made a miscalculation. There are no platforms on those baggage cars. They come out flush like a box car. In the darkness the tramp didn't notice this. He swung on board the tank of the locomotive, worked his way over the coal to the rear, and jumped down, expecting to light on the platform which wasn't there. It had taken him a few minuets cautiously to reach the edge of the tank, and by the time he had got to the jumping-off place, the train was going at its regular gait, or a shade

"The engineer, realizing that this was the first run of the train, and desiring to make a graceful finish and a good record, had pulled her out just a little. She got to going, and going good. She was doing her nicest and gracefulest when the tramp jumped. "Now, what do you think happened? That the hobo was mixed up for five miles along the roadbed? No, sir; not a bit. Wasn't hurt at all. You've seen an amateur magician put a dollar coin on the flat palm of his hand and move the open hand so swiftly through the air that the coin didn't drop off, haven't you, and that the magician pretended didn't drop? Well, sir, that was what isn't there just because it happened to that tramp. He was like the coin against the flat palm. He rested against the blank front end of that baggage car like a fly on a window pane: There wasn't anything below for him to stand on, or anything above for him to hang to. He was just held there, as I say, by that force which came from the fast forward motion of the train. Below him there was space and car wheels. It was a pretty ticklish position, I want to tell you. No wonder the fellow roared and shouted and said as many pious things as he knew how, and said them very loud. Of course he understood that when the train began to slow up for the Omaha yard that force would diminish and he would drop down and be macerated. "Well, he was a lucky tramp. Just as they were passing Bellevue, four miles out of Omaha, the fireman heard him which cost the engineer on board, a and hurried back and saw him. He was a quick-witted fireman and yelled There were three engines endeavoring to the engineer not to shut off just yet, and reaching one of his long pokers over, he caught it into the clothes of the hobo and tried to pull him off and into the safety of the tank. But he couldn't budge him. Then he got to reasoning, and he saw they'd have to shut off and ease down before the adhesive force of the speed would let the artistically folded drapery hung over man be pried off. The engineer slapped on the air and threw her over, and after two miles of easing they got her to a pace that admitted of loosening the Adorument Mr. and Mrs. Abram S. Hewitt, Miss Sarah Cooper Hewitt and Miss Eleanor G. Hewitt gave a party the other night at their home in New York. Although there had been preliminary talk that the anair was to be a vegetable dance, it was really a fancy dress ball, most of the costumes representing flowers. There were no end of red roses. The feminine dancers wore on their heads emblematic posies, as a rule, of great size and vibrating on stalks. Miss Hewitt was a pansy, and the stem of the great pansy on her coiffure stuck out in queer fashion on one side. Mrs. W. Butler Duncan, jun., was an American Beauty rose. Mrs. Francis Key Pendleton was a sunflower. Miss Katherine Duer a rose, Miss Bishop a poppy, Miss Marie throp a very gorgeous tulip, while Mrs. Jacob Wendell, jun., was a red carnation. Although there was no end to the roses, Miss Stone was the only peony. Quite a number of the men appeared in their left-over Bradley Martin ball costumes, others in their usual evening attire. Upon the latter grotesque noses were instantly clapped, and head-dresses bedecked with garden vegetables.

The chief scene of the market garden cafe chantant festivity was the big salon up one flight, which serves as the ball room of the Hewitt house. At one side a stage was placed, and little tables dotted the floor. The guests seated themselves at these as they pleased. Kings and courtiers were jumbled up with kitchen garden produce and hothouse flowers. In the amateur vaudeville performance that was given Mrs. P. Cooper Hewitt did a lightning change act within a wide three-quarter frame set on the stage. In turn she was Moliere, Gismonde and Charles . in wig and mustache. Mrs. Burkeover tights. big salon on the same floor.—New York AUTOMATIC WINDOW SHADES. What is probably the latest development in automatics, says Electricity, is a sun blind recently introduced by a Berlin firm. As soon as the sun shines on the room or window to be protected the blind lets itself down, and when the sun "goes in" the blind draws itself up again. Two glass bulbs are connected by a U-tube partially filled with mercury. A platinum wire melted into the glass makes contact with the mercury at the bend of the tube, and there are also platinum contact wires brought into the sides of the tube, one of which is in contact with the mercury only when it stands level on the two sides, and the other only when the mercury in one side of the tube rises. One of the bulbs contains only air the other is filled with black wool. When no sun is out, the air in the two bulbs occupies the same volume, and the mercury stands at equal heights in both legs of the tube; but when the sun is shining, the bulb with the black wool absorbs the sun's rays, and causes the mercury to rise in the opposite side of the tube. This clos the circuit of a motor which lets down the blind, an automatic switch switching off the current as soon as the blind gets to the end of its range, and reversing the connections of the motor so that it is ready to wind up the blind as soon as the other contact in the tube is made. When the blind reaches the top the current is again switched off, and the connections are reversed at the switch.

> Predictions for the Twentieth Century Are Broad.

COMING CHANGES.

[Popular Science Monthly.] It may be that we are, with respect to the coming century, in the same immature mental condition in which the people of the eighteenth century were with regard to the nineteenth. someone in the preceding century had dared to predict the wonderful achievements of the nineteenth, he would probably have been declared a fool, and treated as was Robert Mayer, in Germany, in this century, who, after the discovery of the law of the conservation of force, was put into an insane asylum. A like fate might befall the man who should dare now to cast a horoscope for the twentieth century, and to predict the progress of the human mind in the various domains of scientific research. After all, those may be right who, in spite of all those acquisitions on which we so justly pride ourselves, are of opinion that we are still moving in only the initial steps, in the leading strings of evolution, and that we are yet very far from the goal of those material and ideal aims which the human race in its unremitting onward struggle is destined to attain, or to show its capacity of attaining. The great Sir Isaac Newton used, perhaps, the most appropriate simile when he compared men with children who on the seashore are picking up here and there a curious pebble or colored shell while the great sea of truth lies still unexplored before them. We can only conjecture as to the probable progress, as we cannot know which position we occupy in the course of human evolution, whether we are still in its beginnings or well advanced. This lies hidden in the bosom of the future.

Witness had hers downstairs with the housekeeper. They generally had bread and butter for preakfast, boiled flour and water puddings and rice for dinner, and occasionally the meat from beef tea made for an invalid daughter of Mrs. Nicholls. On Sundays they used to have ordinary meat. Very often witness had not sufficient. The puddings were hard boiled. Deceased had the same food as witness, and occasionally, but very seldom, they were given potatoes. No supper was given to the girls, and it was not possible to go into the larder and get some food. What food there was was always divided for the day's meals. Deceased and witness never were allowed to have milk, and tea was given them, but without sugar or milk. They could not drink it, so they used to have water instead. Two slices of bread, not half an inch thick, were the portions given for breakfast. Sometimes they had to have some of the crusts left by the invalid instead of the slices. The Coroner-Now, do you consider that enough? The Witness-It was for me, sir, but not for deceased. She used to complain a lot to me. When she could get out, she used to pick up crusts in the street and eat them. If she asked for more to eat, it was refused. She was told that she had had plenty. Continuing, witness said she often used to tell the housekeeper that Popejoy had not had enough to eat, but it was of no avail. The housekeeper always answered that she had had plenty. Deceased dared not complain herself to Mrs. Nicholls for fear of being beaten for doing so. She had told witness so. The Coroner-Beaten by whom?

Witness-Mrs. Nicholls. Occasionally I used to go out with her. It was then she used to pick up crusts or anything else in the street. Once when they were out deceased went into a house. On their return Mrs. Nicholls sked her why she did this, and the girl replied that she did it to get something to eat. Mrs. Nicholls asked her if she got anything, and then witness, who had heard the conversation, left the room, Just after she heard screams. They came from the deceased and were loud screams. Witness detailed the remarks of the deceased to her as to what occurred in the room between her mistress and herself on the occasion of her getting some bread and butter from a friend when she went out. Deceased said Mrs. Nicholls beat her severely with a stick. Witness saw the bruises. They were big blue ones, and were on the legs and arms. While deceased and witness were in the drawing-room hanging pictures on another occasion, Mrs. Nicholls came and gave her a blow with a hammer on her foot. Deceased cried out with pain. The only reason for the blow was that deceased had put a nail too high in the wall.

In answer to further questions the witness said that three days before the deceased left Kensington for Bagshot at Christmas, Mrs. Nicholls knocked her head against the bedstead. The girl screamed and cried, and then Mrs. Nicholls gave her a kick. Witness had seen deceased with a black eye, and deceased had told her Mrs. Nicholls

THE Lutheran, New York, recalls the story of Sheridan Knowles, who heard Spurgeon at the opening of his ministry in London, and made this remarkable forecast:" He can do anything. I was once lessee of Drury Lane Theater, and were I still in that position I should offer him a fortune to play for one season on the boards of that house. Why, boys, ne can do anything he pleases with an audience. He can make them laugh and cry, and laugh again in five minutes. His power was never equaled. Now, mark my words, boys, that young man will live to be the greatest preacher of this or any other age."
