the release of a small portion of the stored waters now. /

"Mr. Holgate says that he heard it said that the department was storing water in the lakes, but that there is no foundation for this, and that the lakes are now lower than they should be under normal conditions. The fact is that ever since the end of August the levels of Stony and Buckhorn lakes have been rising, and are now, and have been for some time past, above regulated navigation level.

Would Limit Flow.

"The report states that discharge above the present flow, which is about 1,200 cubic feet per second, should not be permitted. If the department had permitted an average flow of 1200 c.f.s., there would have been no power shortage. The department calculates the stream flow from readings taken on an ordinary staff gauge by the ment, and the statement frequently made by department officials, that the mean stream flow had been 1200 c.f.s. during the period of power shortage, the above figures, which are obtained by the most accurate known means, indicate quite clearly that the flow has been lower than believed by department officials, and it is true that the difference would have prevented the power shortage.

"In other words, the release of the quantity of water asked for by the commission would have brought up the flow to the rate which department officials stated to be flowing, and sufficient power could have been generated to meet all needs."

Apparently the information supplied by the department of railways, and canals was 'accepted without reference to data supplied by the commission.

"Mr. Holgate states that storage has been drawn on already in favor of power development. The fact is that the storage waters were largely drawn upon in the spring and summer for the use of lumbermen in log-driving at a time when the water so used was wasted as far as power development was concerned.

"The report makes the assertion that the power pasers, when asked whether they preferred the water now or distributed thruout the winter, replied that they preferred the latter. This does not coincide with the situation found by the commission, which was the strictly and concisely of the medicine accompanying the display. Another distinctive feature is the widetins accompanying the display. Another distinctive feature is the bulletins accompanying the display.
