CAN'T BUY HORSES HEREABOUTS

So Newfoundland Operator Gets 57 in Boston.

On the Atlantic express today, among the passengers was Dr. Varian, V. S., who is en route to Newfoundland via Sydney in charge of a consignment of horses, purchased by him in Boston for the Harvey Lumber Co., of St. John's. One carload containing fourteen horses arrived this morning. There are four other carloads on the way, and all together thirty-seven horses will be sent forward in that destination. Dr. Varian, in conversation with a Times reporter, who asked how it was that these Newfoundland lumbermen had to send to Boston for horses replied: "Well, you cannot get them in Canada for the same price. In this country horses from 1200 to 1400 cannot be bought except at a most extravagant price, and lumbermen will not pay it when they can deal with a more reasonable market. It might be said, here that horse-flesh in the Maritime provinces has reached an almost unprecedented status as far as cash demands are concerned. Not long ago Prince Edward Island was the favorite resort for those who wanted horses of late, however, there has not been such a demand in that quarter. The only cause for the decline is attributed to the rapidly increased value placed on horses.

William Duven Will Work Instead of Begging Hereafter.

William Duven, who was arrested in the Union Depot last evening on a charge of begging, was before the Magistrate this morning. Duven represented himself as a shipwrecked sailor, without home or money. Finding that the game was not remunerative he changed his tactics. Approaching fruit inspector Sangster of the L. C. R. he informed that official that he was a staunch member of the Masonic order, but he had been unfortunate and was very hungry. Mr. Sangster offered to give him a meal at the station restaurant, but William thought he could do better elsewhere, and was given a sum of money. Later on an other passenger fell a victim to his ruse, after which he visited a nearby tavern, and sought refreshment in the cup that bears. He returned to the depot, only to find officer Collins awaiting him. The officer stated that the railway officials at Moncton have issued strict orders that no beggars be allowed in that quarter. Passengers must be protected. Duven pleaded not guilty, and stated that he had always worked for his living. He admitted having been drinking, and informed the court that he could get employment at any time. He was sentenced to four months hard labor without a fine.
