The Man In The Street
 Many a person got great bargains last week, but this is not the only reason why some people would like to see another auction next week; they merely want an opportunity to give away some of their purchases.
 With motor-cars selling at a dollar, and even half a dollar, the demand is quite brisk.
 The combination of a patriotic gift and a sporting chance seems to have wide appeal; there should be no trouble getting the next $5,000 for the funds.
 But we have to keep the Red Cross day in mind meanwhile.
 No Appeal
 The traffic policeman at the Mill street crossing was hard at work handling a rush of vehicles when the driver of a carriage tried to take a short cut and promptly was held up.
 "Don't you know who I am?" asked the occupant of the carriage.
 The policeman confessed his ignorance.
 "Well, I am Judge--" was the crushing reply.
 "Sorry, sir, but you have to obey the law just like anyone else," said the cop who refused to be intimidated.
 And the dispenser of justice had to submit.
 Adding Insult
 The neighborhood was aroused during the dark hours of night by the persistent honking of an auto-owner demanding admission to a garage, and still he honked.
 Suddenly the night was further shattered by a belated injunction to stop that horn.
 There was a pause, pregnant with surprise and indignation, before the driver summoned courage to falter: "It's your pardon."
 "Keep that horn quiet or I'll call the police and have you jailed for disturbing the peace," was the next contribution to the duet.
 "Oh, but I say, aren't you coming down to let me in?" was the next plaintive appeal, which went unanswered.
 "Must I spend the rest of the night out here?" was another wail that produced no softening of the heart.
 Then there was a whir of the motor as the driver started in search of some more hospitable spot, and silence reigned supreme.
 Some Concrete Remarks
 The workmen were busy prying up the Potts memorial in Main street. A crowd of bystanders was looking on with mixed feelings of amusement, disgust and indignation. Some of the remarks would have afforded bright lines for a socialistic sketch, others would have been subject to censure by the Moral and Social Reform Council. Of the number which might be proper for publication, a few are herewith repeated:
 "It won't come up as quickly as it went down."
 "No wonder they call this Thanksgiving Day."
 "There goes my next year's tax bill"--this from one merchant as an extra large piece of concrete was piled up.
 "It's not often a fellow has a chance to see real money dug out of a roadway."
 "Let's get up a movement to sell the slabs from the concrete for patriotic funds."
 "Now perhaps we'll be able to ride to Indianapolis in their cars than that old one they had on the review."
 "Well, by New Year's the cars ought to be running over both tracks."

COFFIN MANOR
FOR THE USE OF THE WOUNDED
 Magnificent Offer is Made By R. M. Burden
FINE OLD HOUSE AND EXTENSIVE GROUNDS
 Place Built Hundred Years Ago by General Coffin When Soldiers Were Stationed Here--Inspection and Report by Dr. Skinner

A generous patriotic offer has been made to the militia department at Ottawa by a former St. John man, R. M. Burden, now of Boston, though in reality still an active citizen of this city because of his co-operation and aid in local movement for a deserving cause. The dwelling house is the fine old manor house built originally by General Coffin nearly 100 years ago when the militia were stationed in St. John, with materials imported direct from the old country. It is still in the very best of condition, and its furnishings in walls, floors, fire-places and other appurtenances are most superior. Several of the doors in the house are of mahogany. There is a spacious veranda nicely located in present enclosed in glass and this should make an ideal sun-parlor for wounded men.
 The buildings and grounds are in excellent condition, for a keeper and staff have been kept employed throughout the year by Mr. Burden and he himself with his wife make more or less frequent visits to the beautiful place, spending much of the summer there. There is a lodge for a keeper and his wife upon the farm. The grounds cover so large an acreage that it is not possible from any one point upon them to see their borders. In one part of the orchard alone, to give an idea of how large the grounds are, there are 1,500 apple trees planted. There is also a wide area of farm land tillable for potatoes and other vegetables, more reserved for hay, oats and other purposes, and a pleasant shore boundary on the Nepesee where bathing and fishing would be popular, and boating as well for included in his offer he has given his boats.
 Dr. Skinner yesterday visited the place and has made measurements of the rooms and inspected the general environment, will report to Ottawa. The presumption is that his recommendation will be entirely favorable. Mr. Burden would like also to furnish some of the rooms, and has offered to do so. The proposed offer is regarded as one of the most practical and generous which has been given by any Canadian and Mr. Burden is being warmly commended for his fine showing of patriotic big-heartedness which must to a great extent be tinged with the spirit of self-sacrifice. More than once he has manifested his patriotic spirit since the breaking out of war and the Red Cross Society and other similar bodies have reason to be most thankful to him for large contributions, with even more reason now because of his latest endeavor.

BOTH THE ESTEY BOYS AND GERALD NORTHRUP SEND LETTERS HOME
 A letter received by George Estey, of the staff of M. R. A. Ltd., from his brother William and a friend, Gerald Northrup, told of their being in good health and of their experiences since going to France with the Army Service Corps. They were at the time engaged in building a dugout for themselves for the winter, and expected soon to be "as snug as a bug in a rug." They said that the members of the Army Service Corps were doing well and would soon be giving a good account of themselves at the front. They were located near enough to hear the roaring of the heavy guns along the front line, and at night could see the sky illuminated by the star-bells. They asked to be remembered to their friends in the city.
 Bomb Arthur T. Estey, who is a brother of George and William is now in the Canadian Convalescent Home at Bromley Hill, Kent, England. He was thrown from his horse a short time ago and had two broken ribs. In a letter to his mother, Mrs. George Estey of Kennedy street, he says he is doing well, and expects to go back to France soon with the artillery.

HE IS THE LAST OF 100 BANDSMEN
 A thrilling story of the havoc wrought in the first few weeks of the war among those regiments which were among the pioneers in the field can be well imagined from a letter received yesterday by Mrs. J. Allan Shields of Broad street, from her brother, Thomas, in France since last fall. When war was declared he was a member of the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders Band which numbered 100 pieces, and would have filled his period of service by Christmas.
 The regiment was ordered to the front and the band went with it. The duties of the bandmen on the field of battle was to look after the wounded as stretcher bearers, and the letter says that they did so, and performed their duties nobly and heroically. One after one the bandmen were shot down. The conflict was terrible and few who were wounded lingered beyond a short few hours. Ninety and nine have passed away and of the 100 in the band he alone is left. He took his chances with the rest and was about the firing line with the stretcher-bearing corps, expecting any moment would be his last. Now the lone survivor of the hundred bandmen has been promoted to the headquarters band where his duties will not be quite so exciting but still hazardous.

THE 64TH AND ST. JOHN
 Despite the twice repeated announcements from Ottawa that the 64th Battalion was to be wintered in St. John there are some about the city who are still speculating as to whether this unit or the 88th will be here. It is fully believed that one battery will be stationed here for the winter. If the 64th goes to Halifax, as rumored yesterday, it would mean a very large force of men being stationed there for the winter.
 Already at that port there are 1,100 men with the composite battalion; there will be the same number with the 88th, some 400 or 500 in the reinforcement of the R. C. R., and a new artillery unit is being raised. Placing this estimate roughly at 2,700 men should the 64th go as a double unit to Halifax, it would mean the quartering of 4,700 soldiers there aside from the many sailors from the navy. Many citizens who heard this report yesterday were skeptical and are of the opinion that the 64th will come to St. John before very long.
HOME AFTER GAME
 Some local sport fans who went to Boston on Saturday night to see the baseball game in the world's series returned home today. Almost all were of the opinion that Boston would be the pennant. They said that the two games yesterday and Monday were well worth the trip as they were fast and exciting. Among those returning today were Robert Carson, Vernon Sharpe, H. F. Black, H. J. Sheehan, LeB. Hastings and J. C. Chesley.
