They will be built on the cruiser stern principle, will have three passenger accommodation will be splendidly fitted up and the vessels throughout will show the most modern improvements. They will have sleeping accommodation for about 450 first class passengers. Captain Troup said that the development of the British Columbia coast steamship traffic within recent years had been one of the most phenomenal of all the C. P. R.'s varied activities, and though it was recognized that the new vessels would constitute a remarkable advance over the present accommodation in fact eclipsing anything on cross-channel or coastal service in the old country, he felt that the company was fully justified in ordering the new steamers at this time, and had no doubt that it would be a very short time inded when even these palatial steamers would have to be augmented on the Pacific coast.
