The government receipts have in consequence been far greater than in any previous year, with the consequent result that a very substantial surplus is shown in the province's accounts for the year ending June 30th, 1966. This surplus, it is estimated, was just about a third of a million of dollars. The receipts from the sale of lands and timber limits has since June increased very materially, until the government is now able to show a still larger sum to the redict of the province without any effort on their part, but purely as a review of the grant of the province without any effort on their part, but purely as a review of the grant of credit of the province without any effort on their part, but purely as a refort on their part, but purely as a result of the growing demand for timber and lands in the province.

Close to a million dollars were realized in the sale of lands belonging to the province in the neighborh Vancouver, which were placed on the market a few weeks ago. Thus it is safe to estimate that the government must have on hand at the present time at least one million and three-quarters of public money. This all tends to show what the province is capable of pro ducing. The increase in revenue has not been due to any policy pursued by the government, but is the result of the natural growth of the country and the wonderful advantages it possesses,

In mineral production the provincial mineralogist does not care to venture an estimate of the year's production. He has not yet received the returns from the various sources, and in view of the fact that there was some interference with work as a result of the strike in the Fernic coal mines he does not care to venture a prophesy as to what the production will be. Furthermore, he points out that while it is possible that more ore was mined this last year than in the season previous, it may have been that on account of the higher prices which prevailed there was lower grade ore mined in many cases, so that while the tonnage might have so that while the tonnage might have so that while the tonnage might have and the provincial asking for the payment of certain fees which he claims are due to him for services in the witness box.
