MR. BORDEN'S SALARY.

"Borden has sold out; he is in the pay of the government" is the cry of some Canadian newspapers with reference to the acceptance of a salary by the leader of the opposition.

What nonsense! Mr. Borden was never so independent as he is today, and Laurier when leader of the opposition was never so free from strings.

An opposition leader must give his whole time to the work if he would successfully guide his party and devote that care and attention to the observation of the government which the interests of the taxpayers require. Also he must live, and since he is precluded from earning his living out of politics it follows that, unless he is wealthy, he must be paid for his services either by his party or by the country in whose interests he is working.

Laurier, during his last years in opposition, was supported by members of his party. Consequently he was placed under obligations which he has been discharging ever since at enormous cost to the country. Under the new system Mr. Borden will be supported by the country—not the government, as some like to represent—and so is independent of any obligations whatsoever.

"But the salary was voted by the government," say the objectors. Yes, but not to Mr. Borden. The salary was voted to the opposition leader, and as the government has nothing whatever to do with the choice of the man to fill that position it is obvious that Mr. Borden or any other man who may occupy it could not be more completely placed beyond the influence either of the government or of self-seekers in his own party.

A YANKEE HEMISPHERE.

Roosevelt's Chautauqua speech yesterday amounted to a declaration of a protectorate over all of North and South America—Canada alone, and probably temporarily excepted.

This is a logical outgrowth of the Monroe doctrine and may tend, for a while at least, to reconcile European powers to that arbitrary and unreasonable bit of policy. For, whatever it may have been when President Monroe propounded it, the declaration that no European power may increase its possessions in this hemisphere nor interfere with any Western republic is certainly arbitrary and unreasonable today. Then there was active danger to the United States in the aggression of European nations and American policy was solely concerned with America. There was a logical basis for her position when she could point out to Europe that the United States was meddling in no affairs of the Eastern Hemisphere where they were dominant and was only asking them to do the same with reference to the Western Hemisphere where Uncle Sam was undoubtedly the walk from the Canadian border down to the South Pole. But today, when the United States has possessions in the East and is actively meddling in European and Asiatic politics, her position on this point is logically untenable.

However, since the American government under Roosevelt is disposed to accept the responsibilities as well as the benefits of this policy and is willing to become the guarantor for the decent and honorable conduct of state and business affairs in the South and Central American republics, the powers, which have been having endless troubles with those republics and stand to lose millions of borrowed money unless some strong hand keeps them in the path of honesty, will probably make no protest, especially as none of them—except Britain which is not immediately affected—has any direct interests over here.

But, as Roosevelt's present position is a natural outcome of his distant predecessor's policy, there is an almost inevitable outcome from Roosevelt's which is alarming. Roosevelt protests that the motives of the nation in taking this stand are altruistic and involve no intention of American aggrandizement. As the president is undoubtedly a sincere and honest man this may be accepted as true for the present. But Roosevelt will not long be at the head of the American government and the new American imperialism is bound to foster more extensive ambitions than now possess the nation. From a protectorate, such as at present practically exists—though without the consent of the protected—history shows that it is an easy step to complete absorption. And the Stars and Stripes over the greater part of the two American continents should not be a pleasant sight for those who have striven for centuries to maintain between a few of the greater nations a fairly equitable balance of world power.

Mr. Dooley once remarked that if President Kruger had lived in an up-to-date republic he would have given the Outlanders their franchise—but would have counted the ballots himself. More recently the Territories have been given Provincial Legislatures—but they have been gerrymandered, and the Liberal machine is on hand to see that the new legislatures are composed of men acceptable to the Tariff land grafters and the Ottawa bosses.—Winnipeg Telegram.

"WENT TO SLEEP."

Went to sleep out yonder, Where the daisies grow, An' the daisies hid him from me Long, long ago!

But I see him still in Springtime—Trace his footprints in the snow!

He comes to me when mornin' Makes the meadow smile so sweet; There's a rustle 'neath the rose-leaves— I hear his dear heart beat!

An' on the twilight stairs of life The patterin' little feet!

Went to sleep out yonder— Birds sang him to his rest, And I whispered, in God's silence; "The God that loved him best!"

But he comes near; and still I hear His breathing on my breast! —Atlanta Constitution.

WHEAT UNCLE HIRAM SAID.

Goin' away from home to get rest is just about as sensible as goin' away to campmeeting or convention to get religion," said Uncle Hiram. Sometimes you kin git rest away from home, but most of folks come home tireder then they went.

I've seen people go campin' for a fortnight and they worked harder than they did to home and called it resting.

"My woman," said Uncle Hiram, "went off campin' with a party of folks as Chaplin. She is near-sighted and sun deaf and the young folks said that was an ad-want't a disadvantage, and she wouldn't have to work hard, only kind set 'round and come home a clock, with the wind kick and the cat out. Well, that woman kum home tuckered out, and I kind a laffed when I see her an' said hard work."

"I was in the kitchen, and I was cookin' an' washin' dishes. I'm goin' to have one good sleep and rest now I'm home, said Sophrony, and so she took off her good close and went to work—resting.

We give our minister a vacation last summer—that 'ere come chertier than a donation, an' he cum home lookin' freckler than ever, told us not to do it again, it would kill him. "Twas ye'll preach for me here, just once, and he could not say no, an' they kept him at it all the time.

They used to do the same way. He "advised" himself to go to the country and rest, took the advice. But as soon as he got off the train it was Oh, doctor, kin an' set my ole woman an' come an' see my ole man. An' he kum home tired than ever.

Sim Larkin used to say just about hayin' time that he must go to "protracted meetin' to git his spiritual strength renewed." Well he'd go an' leave his wife to slave her, just once, could, with precious little strength of any kind.

I told Sim one day if he'd git to work real steady on the farm and let his wife go to meen in an' he would hold the baby an' take care the children he'd git a playin' right better. Igitn he'd git runnin' away from his dooty to any camp meetin'. An' I'm not sayin' anything agin any camp meetin' said Hiram, but a religion that won't shrink nor fade ain't got by goin' from home an' work to git it.

Visiting Knights of Pythias Have Had a Good Time Since Coming to the Province.

Start for Home Tonight. The visiting Knights of Pythias from Massachusetts leave to-night by the Calvin Austin for home. The local knights with the 52nd band will escort the visitors to the wharf. This morning was devoted to sightseeing.

Yesterday the visitors were entertained to a sail up river on the May Queen, leaving at two o'clock. In a short time the fog was left behind and disclosed a clear sunny sky. The trip was much enjoyed and the Americans expressed unbounded admiration at the beauty and grandeur of the river.

The band and Fred C. Jones' orchestra were on board and provided plenty of music.

A selection from Jones' orchestra then intervened and afterwards speeches were made by the following visiting and local knights: Colonel Sawyer, Col. Hunt, Capt. McKenzie, Capt. Lee, Dr. Sheppard, Grand Chancellor Ganter, Supreme Representative LeBaron Wilson, James Moulson and Dr. Robert Maxwell, chairman of the reception committee, welcomed the visitors to the city. Grand Chancellor Ramsdell made a happy speech in reply.

"QUINCY ADAMS SAWYER."

The scenic equipment of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," which will be seen here Aug. 14, 15 and 16, at Opera House, is very elaborate and is built for the production. The managers of the play were determined that nothing should mar the genuineness of the country atmosphere, and no expenses has been spared in the stage settings.

Many have asked, "Why is Quincy Adams Sawyer called the best New England play ever written?" The answer has invariably been, "Because it's different from any other play of its class." "But why is it different?" "Oh, everything is so natural, the people are just like the people you see in the country, the scenery is just as real as anything," is the reply.

A LUCKY PURCHASE.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—The latest addition to the romance of great pictures is a remarkable discovery in this city of a Rembrandt described by experts as unquestionably authentic, and probably worth several thousand pounds. It is the portrait of a young and beautiful woman with her lips slightly parted in a slow fascinating smile. Her dress is of a rich blue, ornamented with shoulder knots of a deeper blue, but the feature of the picture is the big hat of velvet—a great daring splash of color relieved by a single feather of light green. The bold treatment of the subject recently attracted the attention of a lady who happened to glance in the shop window. She bought the canvas in its old faded Dutch frame for a mere song and presented it to her husband, Herbert C. Corlette, the present owner, said that his wife purchased the picture entirely on account of its beauty and the mastery treatment it displayed. She had no idea that it was of any particular value. It is now found to be a portrait by Rembrandt of the beautiful Saskia Van Uylenburgh, who afterwards became the wife of the famous artist. The canvas is 20 1/4 inches by 17 1/2 in., and is in an excellent state of preservation.

The concert given last evening at the foot of Garden street by the Carleton Cornet band, was enjoyed by a very large crowd of people.
