There he he entertained no doubt that this was so, but he never married again. The heat an actress with whom he fell desperately in love. He kept his romance a secret and in due course of time returned to school. One day the head master met the boy's father—a rich merchant of Hamburg — in the street.

"How is your son? Better I hope," said the schoolmaster.

"He is quite well," answered the father. "He has not had a severe headache." "No."

"But your son has been absent for the last five weeks and your wife here."

Couple at Kalamazoo, Mich., known as Burt Lawrence, he having assumed the name of the family by whom he was raised.

The agent brought about a meeting of mother and son at Jackson, and the son, a man of 44, heard from his mother the circumstances of the separation of his parents.

She told him, as she told the pension agent, that, in the belief that Smith was dead, she had married a man named O'Hearn, and had lived with him thirty years. He died in 1905.

The old man thought he would like to be free from a wife he had not seen in forty-three years, and he had Attorney Buder file suit. The deposition of the son was taken. This was the only testimony besides that given by the old man himself. There were no character witnesses even. The old soldier drew from his pocket his faded and yellow discharge papers from the army and handed them to the judge. The judge glanced at them and granted a decree.

"He has not had a severe headache."

"But your son has been absent for the last five weeks and your wife herself wrote the letter excusing his absence."

There were exclamations on both sides and hasty inquiries into the mystery.

It appears that the actress and her boy lover had been faced by a great obstacle in their romance. She had to go to school during the day time. Therefore it was apparent that they could not see much of each other.

But love laughs at locksmiths and schoolmasters. So the actress wrote letters of excuse to the head master, signing them in the name of the mother. For five weeks this plan was successful.

The father in his wrath has instituted a prosecution against the actress for forgery.

IN MADRAS COLLEGE

VIENNA, April 1.—Thirty men with blackened faces held up a coal train on a bridge over the Danube just outside Budapest a few days ago.

They fixed a signal at danger and when the driver pulled up they tied him, his stoker, and the guard, to telegraph poles. Then they carried off six tones of coal in baskets to carts which they had in readiness and drove off. Several of them were afterwards recaptured and are now in jail.
