Thus it was, after all, this new type of battle ship which was foreshadowed in the Prime Minister's recent speech at Glasgow, and by Lord Rosebery at Cardiff the other day, and not at all the bigger Dreadnoughts which it was supposed Germany was laying down. It is not likely, however, that the ships of this year's programme will be on this scale of construction, but it is certain that the four conditional battle ships will be on these dimensions when they are laid down next year.

This great leap in Dreadnought construction is due to the knowledge that has reached the Admiralty of the striking development in the German type.
