A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!
THE WORLD ASTONISHED.
HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.
THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, anything under the head as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface to the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth diffusing its cool and regenerating influence.

SKIN DISEASES & GLANDULAR SWELLINGS.

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflamatory action of this Ointment. Angry Eruptions, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Tetter, Ringworm, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Scabies (or Itch) &c., die out, to return no more under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

ULCERS, SORES, AND TUMORS.

The effect of this unrivaled external remedy upon Scrofula, and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produced suppuration, and proud flesh, and then the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

WOUNDS, BRUISES, BURNS, AND SCALDS.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading Hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

UNDENIABLE TESTIMONY.

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases:

Bunions,	Rheumatism,	Sore Throats,
Burns,	Ringworm,	Sores of all kinds
Capped hands,	Salt Rheum,	Sprains,
Chilblains,	Scalds,	Stiff Joints
Pistula,	Skin Diseases	Tetter,
Gout,	Swelled	Ulcers,
Lumbago,	Glands,	Venereal Sores,
Mercurial	Sore Legs,	Wounds of all
Eurptions,	Sore Breasts,	kinds.
Piles,	Sore Heads,

Miscellaneous Selections.

THE POETRY OF AGRICULTURE.

The principles of agriculture are exceedingly simple. That they might be so, God himself was the first great planter. He wrote its laws, visibly, in the brightest, loveliest, and most intelligible characters, everywhere, upon the broad bosom of the liberal earth,—in greenest leaves, in delicious fruits, in beguiling and delicate flowers! But he does not content himself with this alone; he bestows the heritage along with the example; he prepares the garden and the home, before he creates the being who is to possess them; he fills these with all those objects of sense and sentiment which are to supply his surest and physical necessities; birds sing in the boughs above him, odors blossom in the air, and fruits and flowers cover the earth with a glory to which that of Solomon, in all his magnificence, was vain and valueless; to his hand we owe these fair groves, these tall ranks of conjunctive trees, these deep forests, these broad plains covered with verdure, and these mighty arteries of flood and river, which wind them along, beautifying them with the loveliest inequalities, and irrigating them with seasonable fertilization. Thus did the Almighty Planter decide the great plantation to the uses of that various and wondrous family which was to follow. His house prepared,—supplied with all resources, adorned with every variety of fruit and flower, and chequered with abundance,—man is conducted within its pleasant limits, and ordained its cultivator under the very eye and sanction of Heaven. The angels of Heaven descend upon its hills. God himself appears within its valleys at noon-day.—Its groves are instinct with life and purity, and the blessed stars rise at night above the celestial mountains to keep watch over its consecrated interests. Its gorgeous forests, its broad savannahs, its levels of food and prairie, are surrendered into the hands of the wondrously-favoured and new-created heir of heaven! The bird and the beast are made his tributaries and taught to obey him. The fowl summons him at morning to his labors, and the evening chant of the night-tied warns him to repose. The ox submits his neck to the yoke; the horse moves at his bidding in the plough; and the toils of all are rendered sacred and successful by the gentle showers and the genial sunshine which descends from heaven, to ripen the grain in its season, and to make earth pleasant with its fruits.

Growing Potatoes.—Allow me to say a few words in reply to your correspondent respecting the growing of pumpkins. Pumpkins are seldom cultivated alone; the seeds are generally mixed with corn when planting, and when they are grown and gathered the best are reserved for culinary use, while the inferior ones are given the cattle. If one is desirous of raising some excellent pumpkins for pies,—a luxury which none but farmers can indulge in,—I would advise them to give them plenty of room—say four feet apart; and, if the land is in good condition and the plants well cared for, they will be most likely to cover all the space allowed them. When the striped bug attacks them, throw over the vines a dry fine soot,—though the rain will wash it off, when it will be necessary to repeat the process. A good way to preserve pumpkins is to hang them up in the cellar by tying a cord round the stem, which should be left on in all cases where they are to be kept.

O. A. Gould, Watertown, N. Y.

—Rural New Yorker.

Mottoes.—By the quiet fireside of home the true mother in the midst of her children, is sowing as in vases of earth the seeds of plants that shall sometime give to heaven the fragrance of their blossoms, and whose fruit be a rosary of angelic deeds, the noblest offering and ever expanding souls of her children to her maker. Every word that she utters goes from heart to heart with a power of which she little dreams. Solemn is the thought, but not more Solemn to the Christian mother than the thought that every word that falls from her lips, every expression of her countenance, even in the sheltered walk and retirement, may leave an indelible impression upon the young souls around her, and form as it were, the underlying strain of that education which peoples heaven with that celestial being, and gives to the white brow of the angle next to the grace of God its crown of glory.

The following is decidedly not so bad:—

Hoop-de-doodle-doo.—A gentleman conversing with a lady friend, a short time since, claimed that he could parodize on the hoop-question any verse that she might choose to repeat. She accordingly rehearsed the following verse from the "Old Sexton":—

Nigh to a grave that was newly made
Leaned a sexton old on his earth-worn spade,
His work was done, and he paused to wait
The funeral train through the open gate;
A relic of by-gone days was he,
And his locks were as white as the foamy sea—
And these words came from his lips so thin—
"I gather them in! I gather them in!"

Whereupon the graceless fellow took his pencil and thus wrote on a scrap of paper lying by:—

Nigh to a church that was newly made
Stood a lady fair, and thus she said—
Too bad, too bad—I here must wait
While they measure the breadth of this open gate
Ah! 'tis only nine by six I see!
Too narrow too narrow, alas! for me;
And she sighed from her quivering lips so thin—
"I cannot get in! I cannot get in!"

Scene in Court.—Lawyer.—You say you are acquainted with the defendant, Johnson, and call him 'an even-tempered man.' Now in fact, isn't he an ill-natured, violent man—one who is often angry for little or no reason?

Witness.—Why, yes, that's his disposition. I have known him intimately for several years and I call him 'an even-tempered man' because he is always in a passion; never saw him yet when he wasn't storming 'about suthin.

Lawyer.—That'll do. The gentleman can have the witness.

When a Young Man should take his Hat.—Young man, a word. We want to tell you when you should take your hat and be off.—And mind what we offer. It is;

When you are asked to "take a drink.

When you find out that you are courting an extravagant or slovenly girl.

When you find yourself in doubtful company.

When you discover that your expenses run ahead of your income.

When your are abusing the confidence of your friends.

When you think that your are a great deal wiser than older and more experienced people than yourself.

When you feel like getting trusted for a suit of clothes, because you have not the money to pay for them.

When you "wait upon" a lady just for the "fun of it."

When you don't perform your duty, your whole duty, and nothing but your duty.

A Negro was brought up before the Mayor of Philadelphia for stealing a chicken. That conclusively proved.—"Well Toby," said his honor, "what have you got to say for yourself?"—"Nuffin but dis," replied Toby, "I was orney which I state that pullet, cos I thought hab stole de hen; her and neber done it. But above thinking to my mind dat I was labouring under de influence ob ermonia."

It is a remarkable fact that however well young ladies may be versed in grammar, very few of them are able to decline matrimony.

AFTER THE HONEY MOON.

Will wives always continue the study of their husbands as during their honey moon. This is a serious question, but one which is rather out of place here, as we are writing of married men, not their better halves. But we shall shortly resume, as possibly, that portion do not good many of love and tenderness with the same captivity as our noble selves; therefore it is not the wife who should listen this most eventful of the changes of the moon.

When a man has been married half six months, it is astonishing how peculiarly pressing his business suddenly becomes. He no longer idels away the forenoon at home, in frivolous conversation with his cara sposa, but, rarely allowing himself time to throw down his coffee, and bolt his buckwheat, he is into his boots in a twinkling, and off like a rocket run mad. Perhaps his wife seeks to detain him an instant, but the duke of business begs to be excused, saying:

'Mrs. Sneeves, business is business, and must be attended to. I'm half an hour behind my time now. I should like to stop to talk to you, but can't possible; and off he goes to his favorite hotel to peruse the morning papers and smoke himself with a cigar.

When Mr. Sneeves come home to dinner, Mrs. Sneeves runs smiling to meet him, pats him on the cheek, and very likely salutes him; but all this is very annoying to our worthy married man.

'Let me alone my love,' he exclaims, pettishly. 'I have no time for fooling. There, there—you are very pretty; but, if you do wish to do me a pleasure, do go away, there's a dear.'

They sit at the table, and our pattern of a husband is no longer found, as in the early days of there marriage.

'Neglecting his dinner to gaze on her face;' and if Mrs. Sneeves, in the fullness of her affection, tenders him a tit bit from her own plate—a terrididdle, for instance—Mr. Sneeves pretends not to notice her, but to be intently occupied in thought; or perhaps he snappishly observes:

'Do stop your nonsense, Mrs. Sneeves, and don't annoy me. I don't like that part—it's too fat,' as the case may be.

When Mr. Sneeves buys a new bonnet, and come to exhibit it to Sneeves, with an insane idea of affording him pleasure, saying:

'How do you like this, dear? Do you think it become me?'

Mr. Sneeves replies without imposing upon himself the fatigue of even casting his eyes upon his wife.

'Yes, yes; very pretty, very pretty; you are a charming creature, Mrs. Sneeves—charming; but I'm reading—don't annoy me, there's a good dear.'

When Mrs. Sneeves become quite hurt, and inwardly resolves never in the least bit to put herself out endeavoring to please her husband again.

When Mr. Sneeves accompanies her to a party, he leaves her at the earliest opportunity in the corner of the drawing room, to amuse herself as she may, and off he goes to do the amiable to a lady in blue; or perhaps to a dozen different ladies, in a dozen different colors. No matter who he lay in, provided she is not his wife. He dances—but not with his wife. His wife, indeed! the very idea is an absurdity.

After a while Mr. Sneeves takes a hand at whist—time passes; he is in erested in the game, and never bestows a thought upon poor Mrs. Sneeves, who is 'weary of dancing,' and dying to go home. At length Mrs. Sneeves summons resolution to speak to her lord, and accordingly approaching the card table, she says, in mild tone:

'My dear, isn't it time for us to think of returning?'

'Yes, yes, directly! Go dance a little, and then we'll go. Let me see what is trumps? Spades.'

'I do not wish to dance any more. I'm fatigued out.'

'Well, sit down and rest your yourself; but do not bother me. Confound! you've made me lose thatt rick.'

Poor Mrs. Sneeves is silent, and, retiring from the table, waits patiently for half an hour, and then returning to the whist players, dreamingly addresses the gentleman with.

'Come, Mr. Sneeves, it is very late; are you going to come?'

'Yes, yes, in five minutes; not more than five minutes, and then I at your service.'

And miraculous to observe, these five minitues occupy five and thirty minutes in passing. At length or married man gets up from the table and unfortunately for Mr. S., a loser. He snarls out, as he takes her arm—"Devilish annoying not to be able to do as one pleases—to have some one after you, without cessation dingdinging you to go, when you would not go. Women are the most unreasonable beings! Ah! when I was a bachelor I did as I pleased. What a confounded fool I was to throw my neck into a halter!"

As they leave the house Mrs. S., ventures to remark, 'My dear don't you think we had better ride?'

'Poh, no, no!' he replied, 'it's not far. Do you good to walk; fine bracing air, this; besides, these are hard times; we must economize in everything.'

Mr. Sneeves had lost ten dollars at whist, and Mr. S., is out of humor; and—well, the honeymoon cannot last forever.

LEARN EVERYTHING, BUT, KNOW NOTHING.

It may be said emphatically, that this is an age when children learn everything, but know nothing. This is especially true of young girls. The fashionable substitute for the education of the future wives and mothers of the republic, usually undertake, with the most self-complacent absurdity, to instruct their pupils in everything, from French to embroidery, from geology to music. A young lady in this age of progress is not considered to be making any advances at all in education, unless she is studying at this and the same time, the harp and piano, German and Italian, crochet work and mathematics, drawing and dancing the art of conversation, and the art of making a winning appearance. Fine dressing, skeptre like fans, and a handful of phosphorus to fill its brain, does not seem sufficient for all their conversational abilities. As a consequence the rising generation of young ladies are either dunces or coxcombs, the very few thoroughly educated women. The
