AN ASPHALT LAWUIT.
The asphalt sidewalks at present being laid in Prince William street and other streets of the city, it is said, are likely to get the contractor into trouble. Mr. D. W. Bailey, of D. W. Bailey & Co., Kilby street, Boston, has been in the city for a day or two looking round, claiming the pavement being laid by Mr. Magee is an infringement on his patent, and will contest the matter legally. His story is that Magee wrote to him for information as to the laying of the pavement, found out where materials were to be had, and even wished their firm to send a man to the city to superintend the work, stating at the same time that he had secured a large contract. Letters passed between them frequently until, all of a sudden, they stopped. Then the firm commenced to mail a rat and sent their representative down here, who found the work going on. Mr. Bailey has taken legal advice. On the other hand Mr. Magee claims that the pavement is being done in not an infringement on Bailey's patent. He is prosecuting his work rapidly on, and doing it to the satisfaction of all parties. An injunction was spoken of this morning, but none has as yet been issued. This would only tend to delay the work. If Mr. Bailey wishes to contest the question, the best way will be to bring a suit for damages or royalty. We hope that no judge can be found to inflict the injunctive substance on the city in a case of this kind.

Prof. Tyndall thought he could demonstrate that anything besides matter was no matter, but "What's the matter?" is, after all, the material point which sticks the professor.
Sentence of imprisonment with hard labor for twelve months has been passed by Mr. Edlin, at the Middlesex Sessions, on William Dalzell Parson, a retired naval officer, aged only 32. The prisoner's crime was obtaining money by false pretences.
