Versafoods replaced at UNB

UNB - A change occured on campus this summer - although it wasn't a readily noticeable one - Saga Foods, an American company from California, replaced Versafoods as the food suppliers on the campus.

Versafoods still has the contract for food to the St. Tho mas campus, while Beaver Foods has the contract for Teacher's College.

Saga Foods is headed up here by Garry Knox, who comes to UNB after being the Food Service Director at Carleton University in Ottawa. He resumes a similar post here.

The contract for the food supply to the campus was given to Saga Foods late this summer after the university administration apparently decided that it was time that Versafoods went. (They had been here for 14 years.) And so they went, leaving Saga Foods in their stead.

The ontract was given to Saga withey made a successful bid for it after it came up for re-ne tiation. Knox believes that is company won our in the bat of or UNB because of it's abil to employ more students than the other foodservice companies. Saga has plans to hire up to 100 students this fall to work with the company here. Knox claims that Versafoods hired about 30 - 35 at most.

He adds that he believes (naturally) that his company can supply better food and at reasonable prices. Another offer that the company makes is unlimited seconds at the dining halls on campus. (This is for those who eat at McConnell Hall and Lady Dunn).

The remainder of the food program will be made up differently this year, though he declines to say in what way. Ideas will be tried, he said, and poli the people it serves at various times throughout the year. Knox adds that he believes this won't be os much use, but it will provide an outlet for students to express their opinions. Most opinions on the food will be gathered in other ways, he said. One of the new ideas that he plans to try out is the making of the dining facilities at the Memorial Centre into a fast-food opeartion. Everything there is to be served on paper plates, etc., and students will only be able to obtain the traditional hot-dog, hamburger and the like. For food which contains a more balanced diet, students will have to visit the Sub, or either of the two dining halls.

Saga Foods, which has a Canadian office in Toronto, has been in the Maritimes for some time now. They have if they work, then we'll con- been serving Acadia and St. tinue them. Saga also plans to Mary's University so far. UNB has become their third acquisi-

Revenue from the UNB operation is expected to come very close to $1,000,000. Knox would not say what they expected the profits to be, adding that he "didn't normally divulge that information "bepany, and occasionally Knox cause it is "private company
