

To commemorate Dominion Day this year, Mississauga Water Commission completed the installation of flagpoles at its offices on Mavid rd. Flags were unfurled simultaneously by chairman Joe Dobbs and Commissioner J. G. A. Naish, June 28. The Commission has expanded rapidly in the past few years to meet the growing demands of the new town. The staff of approximately 80 people service nearly 25,000 consumer accounts and provide most of the engineering service for new construction. Shown in the photograph are the chairman and Commissioner with some of the staff.

Hey, you! Get offa my cloud!

Model airplane glue can give endless hours of pleasure to children of all ages interested in proving man can indeed conquer the forces of gravity.

It can also permanently damage the minds of sniffers and make them do strange things under its influence.

A Hartland dr. housewife almost fainted dead in her tracks last week when a man walked into her house unannounced, looked around for a couple of minutes, then left without saying a word.

A Mississauga police officer was equally shocked when the same man walked away and disappeared from the apparently locked back seat of his cruiser.

Two Mississauga detectives picked up a Clarkson man the following day and charged him with unlawfully being in a dwelling house and escaping custody.

Orenda strike to last "as long as necessary"

Some 1,280 members of local 717, International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Engineers, walked off the job in a legal strike against Orenda Ltd., Malton, at 12.01 a.m. Friday, July 5.

Negotiations broke off at 6 p.m. July 4 and at press time no further meetings between company and union representatives were scheduled.

Although a wide range of fringe benefits are at stake, the key issue is wages. The company has offered an increase of 18 cents an hour over a two-year contract — 10 cents the first year, 8 cents the second. The union has demanded a 70 cent per hour increase in a one-year contract.

Another main issue is the employee lay-off benefit plan. The old contract provided $20 a week for 13 weeks to a laid-off employee. The company has offered $40 per week for 6½ weeks but insists upon reducing the target amount in the fund from 50 percent to 25 percent.

"They are not giving us anything by this offer, they are taking something away," says union business representative Bob McMillan. He says the union wants to increase the lay-off benefit.

"There isn't a plant in the country that hires more skilled people than Orenda," said Mr. McMillan. "And yet they have dropped off 300 employees in the past eight months. Some of these machinists had over 20 years seniority."

Mr. McMillan described the company offer as "utterly ridiculous considering rising costs and the settlements in other industries."

The union is "preparing for a long strike if necessary," said McMillan. In the past, local 717 has sent donations to any striking Canadian Labor Congress lodges in need of funds and it is expecting similar support from other CLC locals and the international union if its own strike fund becomes depleted.

Each willing striker has been assigned one four-hour picket shift approximately every eight days. The instructions to each picket are "no drinking, keep moving." The strike will proceed with "everything in accordance with the law," according to Mr. McMillan.

In its first few days, the strike was controlled and peaceful.

Assaults on police increase

Official Mississauga Police reaction to an apparent increase in frequency of attacks on police officers is one of concern, but not of emotion.

"We are always deeply concerned when a police officer is assaulted," said Deputy Chief Bruce Kivell.

Instructions to patrol officers about the use of force, billy sticks, and pistols has not changed, according to Mr. Kivell. "As always, policeman will be instructed to use the minimum force necessary to pursue the proper course of justice," he said.

There have been no special orders to "get tough" with offenders. Patrols have not been increased in numbers or in size. "We can only do our jobs, then pass these people along to the courts," Mr. Kivell said.

Two brothers, Constables Gomer and E. G. Banting, both of the Mississauga force, were beaten in two separate incidents in the past two weeks.

Police said there was no connection between the personalities involved in the two beatings, but liquor was a factor in both.

Brown Camp changes name and directors

Brown Camps Day and Residential Schools, or Browndale, is now the official name for the Brown Camps organization.

Alan King, chairman of the board of directors of the newly-formed company, announced the legal change of name. Browndale will be a non-profit organization.

Mr. King produced the movie Warrendale for CBC television. The controversial movie about the treatment of emotionally-disturbed children was never shown on television, but was widely distributed to theatres.

The founder of Brown Camps Ltd., John Brown, and national director Stephen Lewis, resigned from the company effective July 1.
