SHE NEVER SMILED AGAIN.

O, she was gay in youth's bright morn,
And beautiful when young,
And 'midst life's roses knew no thorn,
Till her sweet breast was stung:
The plighted one forgot his vow—
She said it gave no pain—
But a sadness settled on her brow—
She never smiled again!

Miscellaneous.

LUDICROUS.

A young itinerant preacher, in the constant habit of declaiming a great deal about the Creation, and especially about the first getting up of man, whenever he wished to display his native eloquence to good advantage, was one day holding forth to a mixed congregation in a country school-house. Becoming warm and enthusiastic as he proceeded, it was not long before he reached his favorite theme, and started off in something like the following style: "And when the world was created, and the beasts of the field, and fowls of the air, and pronounced very good, God said: Let us make man. And he formed man after his own likeness, and declared him the noblest of all the works of His hands. And He made woman also, and fashioned her in the exact image of man, with a little variation—"

"Thank the Lord for the Variation!" shouted an old sinner, who sat over in the amen corner of the room, at this interesting juncture of the discourse. The effect was perfectly ludicrous and irresistible. The preacher dropped the subject where he was interrupted, and was never heard to allude to it during a subsequent ministry of forty years.

Advice Gratis.—Be content as long as your mouth is full and body covered—remember the fool—kiss the pretty girls—don't rob your neighbor's hen-roost—never pick an editor's pocket nor entertain the idea that he is going to treat—kick dull care to the deuce—black your own boots—sew on your own buttons, and be sure to take a paper and pay for it.

The whole for that sum.—The Duke of Roquelaure, while on a journey, met at a ball at Toulouse a young lady of surprising beauty. He could not forget her, and sent back by a confidential friend, to say that she was the possessor of his heart, and he would give fifty thousand louis d'ors for one hair of her eyebrow.

"Take my compliments to the Duke," replied the lively lady, "and tell him I do not deal in retail; but since I have been so happy as to please him, he may have the whole for that sum!"

A Crocodile Story.—We had some talk, the other day, with one of the very few survivors of the Egyptian expedition under Sir Ralph Abercromby, who has lived to obtain the Egyptian medal, fifty years after it was earned. What a mockery to wait until there were not ten alive in the country, and then award them medals. However, to our story. When the brigade under Sir David Baird was marching up the eastern bank of the Nile, towards Cairo, a number of stragglers fell behind, unable, from fatigue, to keep up with the main body. A rear guard was consequently detached to protect the stragglers and keep them together. One of them a Highlander, however, became so exhausted that his comrades were obliged to leave him to his fate. He had not been long alone when he saw a large crocodile waddling towards him with a very portentous aspect. Poor Donald eyed the monster as it approached him with feelings of intense alarm, and although almost unable to walk, he mustered up his little remaining strength, and abided the onslaught of the enemy. As the unwieldy brute was slinking himself round to receive him, Donald dexterously got astride on his back and kept his seat. He at once drew his bayonet (for he had parted with his musket) and every time the animal turned round his head to bite him, he pricked it severely behind its foreleg, or wherever he could make the steel penetrate. How long the contest continued Donald could not tell, but he thought it an age. When the rear-guard reached head-quarters, the general, on being informed that Donald had been left behind, immediately despatched a corporal's guard to bring him in. On coming up to Donald, there he was still astride of his Bucephalus, which was by this time nearly exhausted, and the wounds inflicted by the bayonet. The musket wound accomplished what the bayonet had begun, and Donald was brought into camp little the worse for his extraordinary encounter, and was ever after known in the regiment as the crocodile dragoon.—North British Mail.

The Gateshead Observer mentions having seen under a glass shade, the size of a lady's thimble, a steam engine that might have served for a cotton mill in Lilliput. The whole machinery, fly wheel included, stands upon a twopenny piece, yet so exact is the workmanship, that when a steam-pipe is applied, for there is no boiler, the engine is immediately set in motion.
