This brings us to the next important matter, namely clean farming and gardening. All sorts of insects find their winter quarters in refuse.

Many that infest grain take refuge in the stubble, others are sheltered by loose rubbish, others again hide in tufts of grass, among the weeds in fence corners, underbark, wherever, in fact, there is shelter of any kind. in fact, there is sheller of any kind.

Now is the time to turn them out and expose them to the frost and weeds of the control of the second of the control every kind, this will destroy many seeds as well as insects. Leave no heaps of rubbish anywhere. Gather up and add to the manure pile the leaves and stalks of roots, potatoes, ets. Plough up old pastures that arrae of Rose beetles. Sorape the larvae of Rose beetles. Sorape the larvae of Rose beetles. Sorape the larvae of the trunks and limbs of fruit-trees but this may be done later on in the winter. By keeping the farm, the orehard, and the garthe farm, the orchard, and the garden clean, myriads of insects will be prevented from finding on the premises the shelter they need during the winter, and will either perish or go somewhere else for a hiding place, and thousands more that are in the egg or chrysalis stage will be destroyed. Many, no doubt, will think all this too much trouble but if there. all this too much trouble, but if they faithfully try it, they will soon find that it pays.

WHAT BRITAIN WILL SPEND IN LONDON THIS WINTER.

Parliament Votes the Money - John Burns Is to Have the Spending of It In His Hands-His Frank, Not to Say Brutal, Talk-Some Men Better Dead-The Pauper Army of the Metropolis.

With the first touch of frost the thin-ly-clad, ill-nourished tramps are driven to the cities for warmth and food. It is in winter, for this reason, that the problem of the unemployed obtrudes.

Another cause is the cessation of many industries and employments that give work to unskilled labor in warm weather. Every cky has its quota of unemployed. Prof. C. J. S. Bethune, of the Guelph Agricultural College, in a recent bulletin, gives some valuable pointers on the subject of fall work against insects. The time of year has now arrived when most of our ployed, according to its population and its general prosperity. London, the richest city in the world, has the most city in the world, has the most city in the world, has the man out of work, and London has already made preparations for grappling with the tremendous and dangerous task the winter of 1906-7 is sure to bring.

insect foes have ceased their active work and are wathdrawn from observation and consequently most people come to the conclus on that the season's fight is over and that nothing need at present be done. But this is very far from being the case. There are many destructive insects that can be more easily dealt with now than at any other time of the year.

Parliament Votes the Money.

Mr. John Burns in presenting the estimates of the Local Government Board to Parliament, said $1,000,000 will be spent by the British Government in tiding hungry and homeless men and will be spent in the City of London, will be spent in the City of London, will be spent in the City of London, will be spent by the British Isles flock in pursuit of employment. Besides this million dollars that will be spent by the Money. Parliament Votes the Money. First and foremost the Pea-weevil.

The losses from this insect have been very much lessened during the last two seasons in Ontario, but this does not mean that we have got rid of the trouble. The insect is still with us, but being in greatly reduced numbers can the more easily be dealt Government.

John Burns' Plans.

All of these works can be made eventually profitable to the community which carries them out, and by each local district employing men and setting them to work on useful jobs, paying them decent wages, so far as the funds at my disposal will allow, I hope to do a little toward the solution of the unemployed problem which confronts the country.

Some Men Better Dead. In addition of this treatment of the peas themselves, the peas-traw and rubbish should be cleared up and burnt and all refuse where threshing has been done should be similarly got rid of. This will destroy any weevils that have already come out and are hiding away for the winter. It will pay to do this whether the insect is known to be present or not.

"If' you want maladministration, approve of it; if you want the Government to steal elections, approve of it; if you want them to appoint criminals to public service, approve of it; if you want all these things, support the Government candidate. But if you want honest administration, if you want to show your disapproval of these methods, vote for the opposition candidate. One vote with another does not matter much. But it is a serious question for the electors whether they shall give their approval of such corruption or shall by their votes settle it once and for all."—From address of R. L. ## IRELAND A LITERARY FONT.

Its Folklore Is the Source of Many English Books.

That Irish literarture is the source of much of the literature of England and America, and that many of the plots of the stories of both nations were taken from Irish folklore, was the declaration of Prof. Thomas Taylor Drill at a lun-cheon of the Irish Fellowship Club at the Union restaurant in New York re-cently. Prof. Drill recently returned from a visit to Ireland, where he was sent by the Irish Choral Society of Chicago, to begin a movement for the re-vival of the music and folklore of Ire-fand. He is the musical director of the society.

"Rip Van Winkle' is a steal from an Irish legend," said Prof. Drill. "There an Irish legend," said Prof. Drill. "There are innumerable stories in Ireland of the long sleeps of heroes and their adventures on awakening. At Killarney a man fell asleep and slept 300 years. The peasants still show the marks in the rock worn by his arms and hips." Much of Prof. Drill's address was given to urging the importance of finding fit musical expression for the mass of untranslated and little known songs and legends of the island. He characterized the movement of the Choral Society as "the greatest musical movement ever known."

ment ever known."

"Treland had battle hymns, marches, folk songs, and chants in the fifth century," he said. "The Irish people were the first to employ harmony and counterpoint. England had little or nothing in the form of musical expression until the fifteenth century. The music of Ire-land helped the nation more than any-thing else in its wars, and to conquer the people England had to enact a law against the making and singing of

"There are known to be at least 1,600 songs in Ireland, and of these the music of only 200 has been written. In spite of this, in its present condition Ireland is not a land of song. The musical and iterary development of the country has been checked and thwarted, and it is only by help from America that the Irish can bring the music of their country to its true greatness."
