Brunswick Hotel Badly Damaged

Moncton, Aug. 30.—Fire started this morning in the Brunswick Hotel here completely destroyed the upper two stories of the structure and resulted in considerable damage to the remainder of the building. At 10.35 the fire was reported under control.

The patrons of the house succeeded in escaping from the building. Among them being Harry Atkinson, of the law office department of railways, Ottawa, a former mayor of Moncton, who was on a visit here and who reached a place of safety by fire escape.

The fire, it is reported, started in the kitchen and shot up through a duct flue to the upper part of the building.

The loss is covered by insurance. The property was insured for about $179,000.

There were 112 patrons in the hotel when the fire started.

Duck Shooting Season Opens Sept. 15th

Duck shooting in New Brunswick does not begin until Sept. 15. There has been a mistaken impression in some quarters that the duck season opened on Sept. 1, but such is not the case.

In former years the duck season began earlier, but now that Canada is a party to the migratory bird law duck shooting in this province and Nova Scotia is illegal until Sept. 15 and extends from that date until Dec. 31.

The season for woodcock, Wilson snipe or jacksnipe also opens on Sept. 15, but closes on Nov. 30. There is no partridge shooting in New Brunswick this year.

A St. John man who wrote to Ottawa concerning these matters had an official letter yesterday in reply definitely fixing the opening for duck shooting as Sept. 15 and on Sept. 1 as in the former years.

Young Man Shot Near Chatham

A widespread practice of garden and orchard pilfering is arousing many farmers and orchardists in Chatham and vicinity, and the owners have had to take drastic measures to save the result of their labors. In one case shots were fired at orchard raiders by a man living on the road between Chatham and Richibucto. A youth named Henry Murray received a charge of partridge shot in both of his legs and was so badly injured that the orchard owner had no difficulty in effecting his capture. Young Murray was escorted to the town hospital in Chatham and appeared before Magistrate Campbell, who was of the opinion that the young man had received a salutary lesson. The man who fired the shots took the precaution not to aim towards any vital part of the youth's body.

Several farmers near the town are known to be keeping guard all night in an effort to catch thieves.

Lord Beaverbrook Made Speech at Ship's Concert

Lord and Lady Beaverbrook arrived in New York on the Cunarder Aquitania on Saturday and planned to leave on Sunday by automobile for Canada. The New York Times says that Lord Beaverbrook delivered a speech at a ship's concert on the subject of Anglo-American relations, and said that the greatest thing in the world today was the maintaining of the amity and cooperation of the United States and Great Britain. Any person he said whether he is an American or a Briton, who tries to create discord between them is a traitor to his own country.

Myron T. Herrick, former United States Ambassador to France, also made a speech at the concert confirming the remarks of Lord Beaverbrook.

A trans Canada flight, half way by seaplane and the other half by airplane, is contemplated by the Canadian Air Board, the effort to be made toward the end of next month.

Sleeping Sickness

There are two diseases to which the term sleeping sickness has been popularly applied. The first is a disease found in certain parts of Africa, the germs of which is transmitted by a species of fly called the tsetse fly. The victim of that malady falls into stupor, which gradually becomes more and more profound, until it terminates in coma and death. It is the second disease, however, that interests us especially for it prevails to an increasing extent in many parts of our own country.

"BUY AT HOME"

The scientific name of this form of sleeping sickness is Encephalitis lethargica, meaning inflammation of the brain producing lethargy. The disease begins gradually with head aches, dizziness, loss of strength and a general feeling of illness; soon fever appears, and the patient complains of sore throat and double vision. Not infrequently there is insomnia during the stage, and there may be slight delirium. There is nothing distinctive in the symptoms except the seeing double, which is quite characteristic and should warn the physician to be on the watch.

After a week or so the patient begins to be drowsy; he wakens to do or sleep most of the time, and usually he is irritated by attempts to arouse him. There may be more or less delirium alternating with the drowsiness, but the mind as a rule remains fairly clear during the waking moments. The patient in this stage is apparently contented and in answer to the usual question at each visit of the doctor says that he feels pretty well. In the mildest cases the patient is merely apathetic rather than lethargic; he is not really asleep, but simply takes no interest in himself or in his surroundings and wants to be left alone. He resents any efforts to arouse his attention. In some cases the delirium is quite violent and the patient suffers from disturbing hallucinations, and the fever is high, although the inclination to sleep is not overbearing. In other cases there is slight paralysis of the facial muscles, with a consequent drooping of the jaw, or some stiffness or weakened control of the arms or legs.

The cause of the disease is undetermined. It is significant, however, that epidemics of it, such as that which has been prevailing in Europe and is now prevailing in this country have been observed in connection with influenza epidemics. The two diseases occur at the same time or the encephalitis follows the influenza. That was observed in the epidemic of 1889-90 as well as in that of 1918-20, and in the eighteenth century so many cases of Encephalitis lethargica occurred after an influenza epidemic that it was popularly called an epidemic of sleeping sickness. There is no curative treatment, and all that the doctor can do is to relieve the distressing symptoms and maintain the patient's strength. Fortunately the disease is not necessarily fatal. From sixty to seventy-five per cent of those who are attacked recover.

Death of Pulp Wood Will Follow Waste

That there must soon be not a mere shortage but an absolute dearth of pulp wood, besides which the present paper lack will be regarded as almost abundance, unless the prevailing extravagantly wasteful destruction of forests is promptly checked, was stressed in an address before the weekly meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers by Charles Barrell.

Mr. Barrell, Jack from a three months' journey through the Canadian Northwest, gave a vivid word-picture of the methods, and shortsighted, improvident practices in that great regional source of the bulk of the present supply of paper pulp wood.

"So rapidly are the vast forests being denuded," said the speaker, "that the growth product of say, 100 years, and in a particular case instances, even of 1,000 years, is consumed in a single day's felling, a rate of consumption which it was self-evident could not long continue without resulting in practically a total extinction of supply."

In extending an invitation to his hearers to witness at an early date the screening of the remarkable scenic and industrial footage "The Specter," to say nothing of a magnificence of settings and a wealth of detail which thus far the motion picture has merely sketched.
