With every little word I said, The anguish of his soul.

He did not ask to urge his suit When met by my diedain, But oh ! his glances told, though mute, His bursting bosom's pain. I think I see his noble brow Clouded by deep despair. And gladly would I cherish now The love that struggled there. Years have rolled slowly, sadly by,

Since that ill-fated day,
And oft I've mourned with bitter sigh
The heart I cast away. Oh ! what would I have given since then, That epurned one to recall, Once on mine ear to hear again Affection's murmur fall !

The dreams of wealth which ruled my choice Are dreams to me no more. And for one note of Love's eweet voice I'd give its worthless store! The jewels glittering on my brow othe not my stifled sighs, Nor riches e'er the tears arrest

Which flow from these and eyes They tell me I should benny be When luxuries surround, And wonder that in mirth and glee My smile is never found.

They little know my hidden grief, Too bitter to be told. Who think the heart can find relief In luxury or gold:

'Tis by experience (dearly bought) I've learned to prize too late The faithful heart by love o'erwrought But let it be-'tis past what cure The world can e'er suggest; And silently must I endure What love has ne'er confessed!

Anorman Victim.—On Tuesday last, in this town, Tim Brennan died suddenly; of Delicium Tremens. But every one acquainted with Tim's habits knew what killed. Tim, and therefore, there was no occasion to put the district to any expence about the matter.

about the matter.

There are some more among us follow-There are some more among us following Tim's footsteps, and when they go, it wont be necessary either to summon thirteen men to find the cause of their death.

The people might suppose, from the number of victim's here, that they would soon be all gone. This is a great mistake, for the moderate men will supply their places fast enough.

"Can such things be and overcome us like summer cloud, And not excite our special wonder?"

Look out for more Tim's! The Tem-perance Roll Book lies at the Stone Block; there is room for a few hundred more who ought to sign.—Ibid.

THE CONSOLATIONS OF THE COOK .- Mar THE CONSOLATIONS OF THE COOK.—Marshal de Mouchy pretended that Pigeon flesh had a consoling virtue. When he lost any friend or relation, he used to say to his cook—"Give me roast pigeons to-day; for I have observed that, after having eaten a couple of pigeons, I always rise from the

THE GENESEE FARMER.

A .Monthly Journal of Agriculture, Hortid Rural Affairs. -For 1849.

THE Publisher of the Farmer gratefully acknowledges the receipt of numerous lists of new subscribers, from all parts of the country, during the past month. The encouragement bestowed upon the enterprise, by its Patrons and the Press, since the publication of the January number, is most gratifying—and proves that the work is considered the cheapest and best Agricultural and Horticaltural Magazine ever offered to the American Public. Post-Masters, Agents and other prominent Friends of Improvement, are entitled to especial thanks for the generous and nobic exercise of their influence in behalf of the work — If each of the scores of new subscribers that we are daily receiving will also lend their kind offices to extend its circuation, the Farmer will have Fifty Thousand Sub-scribers before the 1st of May next-which would enable us to make it, in every respect the Patern Agricultural Journal of the United States.

United States.
The January number is universally pronounced the most beautiful Farmer's Journal yet issued in this country—while its contents, to say the least are equal to those of any of its contemporaries. And the February number, already published, is cortainly not inferior, and probably more interresting than the former. The two numbers are illustrated with about Forty Engravings, including a steel-plate Por-Each number of the Farmer will contain
