Wedding Bells.

MITCHELL-BAIRD.

(Montreal Mail, Aug. 14th.)
A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Thursday afternoon at Knox Presbyterian Church, Dorchester St., when Miss Elleen Baird, daughter of Mr. J. C. Baird, of St. John's, Newfoundland, and granddaughter of the late Hon. James Baird, became the wife of Mr. Burnham L. Mitchell, of the Royal Bank of Canada, Montreal. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. E. A. Montgomery. The bride, who was given away by Mr. G. S. C. Sara, was robed in white satin with lace train and veil, and carried a shower of white roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Dallas Baird, who was attired in a frock of pink chiffon, and carried sweet peas. Mr. Blake McInerney was groomsmen. A reception, which was attended by many of the friends of both bride and groom was later held at the residence of Mr. Sara, on Sussex Ave. Among the relatives present from out of town was the bride's mother, Mrs. J. C. Baird, of St. John's, Nfld. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell have gone to Quebec, whence they are leaving on a motor tour through Maine and New Brunswick.

Baseballers Arrive.

An accommodation cross country train arrived in the city at an early hour this morning, bringing along the Grand Falls baseball team who will play our city team in the first game of the Inter-Town series on Wednesday next. The paper town players will have a try out on St. George's Field this afternoon and again tomorrow in order to get accustomed to the diamond.

The Lynching of Leo M. Frank

Amazing Scenes Follow Arrival of Body at Atlanta.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 17.—Leo M. Frank's body was brought to Atlanta this afternoon and secreted in a barn until a crowd searching for it threatened serious trouble. It was then taken from the barn to an undertaking establishment, where to-night a steady stream of persons passed it to view it.

The temper of the people seemed not so much to wreak vengeance upon the lifeless form, but to personally assure themselves that it really was the body of Frank.

Forty policemen were on guard at the undertaker's establishment, and a crowd that blocked traffic stood for hours in front of the place. The body was shown just as it had been cut down from an oak tree at Marietta this morning.

The body will leave here at midnight to-night for the home of Frank's parents in Brooklyn, according to Herbert J. Haas, who was one of Frank's attorneys. Men and boys did a thriving business here to-day selling photographs of Frank's body as it swung from a tree near Marietta.

THE FOOLISH QUEST

Old Billy Bubble is hunting trouble, he's always in a sweat; he wants to borrow a bunch of sorrow -- an easy thing to get. If things are pleasant enough at present, he knows that grief is in store; if days are sunny, he'll bet good money that torments soon will pour.

If things are humming, old Billy's up-coming, with prophesies of gloom; "There be a panic," he says, "titanic, and that will end the boom." When crops are growing and men are crowding, o'er promise of big yields. "The hall will wait 'em," says Billy, "and git 'em, or cyclones sweep the fields." Old Billy tires us when he desires us to hearken to his rede, for foolish whining and vain repining are not what people need. They are not spolling to go a-tolling in mines where gloom is dug; they'd rather tarry with chaps who carry the cheerful type of mug. The doleful speaker, the trouble seeker, becomes a public pest; if you are searching where trouble's perching, forsake the foolish quest.

Skipper Sav'd Ship from Airman

BY USING ROCKETS.

"Now, chaps, stand by! we're off to Davy Jones' locker," said Captain Smith of the British steamer Pandion when a German aeroplane hovered above the vessel while the operators dropped bombs on the steamer.

Captain Smith and his men did not go to the locker, however, and one of the crew, now carpenter on the Manchester Miller tells of an exciting trip from Rotterdam to Manchester in which a German submarine and an aeroplane attempted to dispose of the Pandion.

Captain Smith managed to escape the underwater craft and was later attacked by the air craft. By skilful manoeuvring, the skipper of the steamer managed to prevent a strike for a time but finally several bombs struck the deck and exploded without, however, doing any damage.

Then the captain told the crew to stand by and prepare for the worst; but he did not give up hope of saving his craft. With the help of the carpenter a bluff was carried out that worked to perfection.

The skipper and his assistants procured several powerful rockets, used for signalling, and soon the German plane was darting away from what must have seemed to the enemy like projectiles from a gun.

The plane came back to the attack under cover of the clouds of smoke that poured from the funnel of the Pandion and steadied for a last try to destroy the steamer.

Captain Smith discharged a rocket which exploded directly beneath the aeroplane and a second rocket, sent by the carpenter, pierced a wing of the aircraft.

The hit saved the ship. The Germans swooped away, evidently believing that the freighter was equipped with a powerful gun.

During the exciting period of attack an Arab who was on board the Pandion practically ran amuck and scampered about the deck shouting wildly. He had a bag in one hand and a basket in the other, intending to save his effects, and finally climbed into the rigging to escape the bombs.

POOR FISHERY WEST. — By the Portia we learn that the cod fishery with the S. W. coast is poor. Lack of bait is the cause.

He Got the Interview!

And a Chicago Business Man Was Taught a Valuable Lesson by a Reporter.

A reporter on a Chicago daily called at the office of a prominent business man and presented his card, asking for an interview.

The business man's secretary went into a private office and, returning a minute later, said that his employer was too busy to be interrupted.

"This is a matter of great importance," said the reporter. "Please return and tell him so."

The secretary again went to the office and brought back the same answer.

"I am compelled by the importance of my mission to be insistent," said the reporter. "Please tell Mr. Blank that there are two hundred and fifty thousand people waiting to speak with him for five minutes."

The secretary thought he was being joshed.

"I mean exactly what I say," said the reporter. "Please tell him exactly that—that there are two hundred and fifty thousand people cooling their heels outside his office."

Impressed by the seriousness of the reporter, the secretary did as he was asked. The business man then came from the office and gruffly asked what was wanted and what was meant by such a message.

"I want five minutes of your time to give you an opportunity to answer a telegraphed story which has come to our office and I am doing you a favor by insisting that you give me this time," said the reporter. "As to there being two hundred and fifty thousand people here, that is the number representing the circulation of my paper."

The interview was granted and, as the reporter left, the secretary was surprised to see the business man escort him to the door, shake hands with him cordially and thank him profusely for having called.

Boot on the Other Foot.

We must admit, when we come to think of it, that our blockade of the South during the civil war interfered very seriously with British trade. Cutting off the supply of cotton reduced Lancashire to the verge of starvation, and British merchant who shipped goods from a British port to a British colony were naturally wroth at their capture by American cruisers on the ground that they were destined for Confederate ports. Now that other belligerents are interfering with our trade, we have got to remember that half a century ago the boot was on the other leg.—Philadelphia Record.
