The Two Campaigns.

It was one of the popular conceptions of warfare, before the war, and it still survives healthily, that the movements of armies are a good index of their fortunes, advance standing for victory, retreat for disaster, that the important results of a battle are the miles of territory lost and won, and that an army which stands its ground and loses heavily does better than one which retreats intact. In some cases, but for other reasons, the belief is correct; accepted as a general rule it is a great fallacy. The campaigns in Flanders and Italy are a good illustration and comparison. It would seem ridiculous, if it were not true, to say that the few miles of muddy slopes called Passchendaele represent a victory as great as that won by Mackensen and the armies which he leads in yet unchecked flood across the Venetian plains. We are not sure it is not greater.

There need be no concern in the mere fact that Cadorna has retreated from the line of the Piave. The stream afforded him little natural protection and he had not had time to prepare positions of sufficient strength. He is withdrawing his troops in good order and discipline to a better line, that is all, and the delay of the past two or three days ought to have been invaluable for its preparation and for the arrival of friendly reinforcements. Mackensen will run his head soon against a stone wall of tougher substance than the crumbling defences he has been accustomed to override in Russia and Roumania. Italy adjoins France and so Britain, and in Britain and France they have a few good guns.

The taking of Passchendaele—rather, of the slopes around it, for the village is a heap of ruins—is a fine achievement, perhaps the best achievement yet in Johnnie Conqueror's cap. It is hardly just to praise the feat as it were an isolated one, for it is but the culmination of the long succession of hammer blows that Haig has been dealing since July. But now, at that culmination, it is fitting to take a survey of the situation, to stand on it, were, upon the captured summits and rather from the prospect they open the tremendous value of their possession.

If the British do no more than hold this ground, it will be much to hold. But they are not to stand there, and to be able to pound to pieces through the winter the positions of the enemy down in the valley. But they will not rest here. There are numerous defences on the left of the new position yet to be overcome, but their reduction will follow automatically. Houthulst Forest will then be at the mercy of the British guns and should prove quite untenable. Its abandonment will remove one of the worst obstacles our troops have had to face, a stronghold which they have not attempted to attack frontally. But it is already flanked in a most acute manner, and it is reasonable to hope that it will exert a direct effect upon the other campaign in Italy. Nothing could be more favourable to the Allies than the withdrawal of German forces from that region to dam the advancing flood in Flanders, while, whether they be withdrawn or not, the flood will surely creep on.

BELGIAN REPORT.

PARIS, To-day.
Belgian statement: German artillery activity in general slackened, but in the evening Belgian posts south of Dixmude were violently shelled. Belgian artillery replied energetically.

AMERICAN ELECTIONS.

NEW YORK, To-day.
The outstanding feature of the elections in the United States yesterday was apparently the assured victory for women suffrage in New York state by a majority of approximately forty thousand. While the suffragists were winning in the east the early returns from Ohio indicated a defeat for them in that state. Two states, Ohio and New Mexico, voted on prohibition. Incomplete returns from Ohio showed that the contest in that state was very close, with the drys leading by a small margin. The prohibitionists evidently had carried New Mexico. The entire Republican state ticket won an overwhelming victory in Massachusetts, while the Democratic state ticket was successful in Virginia. The Republican ticket in Chicago was defeated by a plurality estimated at 80,000, the Socialist candidate standing on an anti-war platform. The attempt of Senator Ferguson, backing the Socialists at a town meeting of the candidates, to oust the Vane Brothers from the control in Philadelphia on the face of returns up to midnight appears to have been unsuccessful, but at that hour both sides were claiming victory. William Magee, a former Mayor of Pittsburgh, seemingly was defeated by E. V. Babcock, a wealthy business man. Both are Republicans.

GERMAN DEVICE NOT SUCCESSFUL.

LONDON, To-day.
The Press Association on the highest authority says that four electrical controlled boats similar to the boat the destruction of which was announced by the Admiralty Saturday, already have been destroyed. The Press Association adds that the naval authorities have known of the existence of these boats for some time and regarded them as freak craft. It is asserted that first of them came to grief some time ago by running into a pier on the German coast.

BIG RUSSIAN STRIKE.

PETROGRAD, To-day.
At yesterday afternoon's session of Parliament, Premier Kerensky, referring to the Maximalist attempt to seize power and provoke civil war, said that the Russian people are at the same time threatening to open the front to Germany. The Premier asked the preliminary Parliament to reply immediately as to whether the Government could rely upon its support. The House is now discussing the question. Three hundred thousand workmen in the district of Ivanovo Voznesensk have gone on strike. The town is one of the chief centres of the cotton textile industry and there are a number of large textile factories there.

AVIATION.

LONDON, To-day.
The official communication on aviation issued last night says: Yesterday the only slight improvement in the weather, but mist still prevented our airplanes from carrying out artillery and photographic work. Only a few combats took place in the course of which two enemy machines were downed. In addition a low flying hostile machine was shot down in our lines by our infantry. One of our machines missing.

DETAILS OF PASCHENDAELE VICTORY.

LONDON, To-day.
Telegraphing last evening from British headquarters in France, Reuters' correspondent said: Success signals have been soaring skyward with gratifying frequency during the early forenoon. We had been fighting through Passchendaele and beyond but delays occurred. The situation thereabouts, as elucidated, shows that the Canadians were digging in at some points east of Passchendaele this morning. It was severely reported that the enemy were massing heavily for counter attacks and at midday an intense barrage opened along the section presumed to be the line of our new front. We reached the final objective in large numbers with the guns well forward and therefore in a good position for supporting the infantry. The walking wounded men are in high spirits over the day's achievement. They all say our barrage is due to the Germans not taking to the fight at close quarters. It may be explained that we collected a respectable number of machine guns. The prisoners are mostly of a better type than usual, well nourished and well clad, thus indicating that the Huns (not finished).

OVER CHANGE IN ARGYLE'S SCHEDULE.

SPECIAL TO EVENING TELEGRAM.
ARGENTIA, To-day.
Bad service made worse. Great indignation felt all over the Bay because of recent change in Argyle's schedule. The Government will be flooded with petitions, and with good reason, to have Fortune and Grand Bank removed from Argyle's route. This latest change is a scandalous injustice to the people of this Bay and it will resent it very forcibly.

Assaulted His Sister-in-Law.

An assault case between two young married people arising out of a family quarrel, occupied the attention of the Magistrate's Court this forenoon.

The complainant is a sister-in-law of the defendant. It seems that while she was engaged in a pretty hot dialogue recently with the wife of the defendant, the latter interfered, striking the complainant with his fist a couple of times and knocking her down. He was convicted of the assault by Judge Morris, who fined him $50 or two months' imprisonment; also it was ordered that the fine if paid, was to go to the complainant, who is in a weak state of health.
