THE PUPPET CROWN.

BY HAROLD MACGRATH.

[Copyrighted by the Bowen-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.]

"It would not be difficult," he mused, commencing with the thought, which had come to him. "It would be something real, and not a chimera."

He turned over the horses to the groom, and went in search of Fitz. He would inform him of his discovery; but the Englishman was nowhere to be found. Neither was Madame. Being thirsty he proceeded to the dining hall. Fadtate, the maid, was laying the silver.

"Ah, the pantry maid," he thought. "Good day, Fadtate."

"Does Monsieur wish for something?"

"A glass of water, please!"

She retreated and kept her eyes lowered.

"Fadtate, you are charming. Has any one ever told you that?"

"O Monsieur!" blushing.

"Have they?" lessening the distance between them.

"Sometimes," faintly. She could not withstand his glance, so she retired a few more steps, only to find herself up with the wall.

With a laugh he sprang forward and caught her face between his hands and imprinted a kiss on her left cheek. Suddenly she wrenched herself loose, uttered a frightened cry and fled down the pantryway.

"What's the matter with the girl?" he muttered aloud. "I wanted to ask her some questions."

"Ask them of me, Monsieur," said a voice from the doorway.

Maurice wheeled. It was Madame, but her face expressed nothing. He saw that he had been caught. The humor of the situation got the better of him, and he laughed. Madame ignored this unseemly hilarity.

"Monsieur, is this the way you return my kindness?"

"Permit me to apologize. As to your kindness, I have just discovered that it is of a most dangerous quality."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that I could not kiss Madame the countess with the same sense of security as I could the pantry maid," bowing.

Just now Madame's face expressed a good deal. "Of what are you talking?" advancing a step.

"I had in mind what our friend, Colonel Beauvais, remarked in his recent dispatch: I know no discrimination. The fact is, I do. I found the dispatch on the floor this morning. Allow me to return it to you. I have kept silence, Madame, because I did not know how to act."

"You have dared—" her lips pressed and her eyes flashed.

"To read it? Aye, I am a prisoner; it was in self-defense, Madame, you do me great honor. A countess! What consideration to the indifference! Au revoir, then, till luncheon," and he left the room, whistling—

Voici le sabre de mon pere!

CHAPTER XI.

At no time during the afternoon did Maurice find the opportunity to speak privately to Fitzgerald. Madame hovered about, chatting, smiling and humming snatches of song. She seemed to have forgotten a sudden attachment for Maurice; that is to say, she could not bear to lose sight of him, not for the briefest moment.

He swallowed his chagrin, for he could not confess that it was sugar-coated. Madame had at last considered his case and had looked at him dangerous. Somehow a man always likes to be properly valued. It re-establishes his good opinion of himself.

Well, well; however affectionate Madame might be, she could scarcely carry it beyond the threshold of his chamber, and was determined to retire at an early hour. But he had many things to learn.

Fitzgerald abandoned to the countess, who had still much color to regain. From time to time the Englishman looked over his shoulder to see what was going on between Madame and his friend, and so missed half of what the countess said.

"Come," thought Maurice, "it is time I made a play."

SOVEREIGN BRAND

GOOD dressers will be interested in our spring showing of these superior suits. Our west window this week is filled with Sovereign Brand Suits. In the center of this window display we are showing a garment similar to the above cut, in an unfinished state, in order to show how our clothing is made; for no matter how good the outside of a suit is, if the "insides" are not good you know the inevitable result.

There's the soft canvas, the kind the very best tailors use, and this canvas is thoroughly shrunk in our own shrinking rooms before being used.

Then the haircloth—not an imitation—but the real thing, the product of the largest makers in England.

Then there's the padding, which together with the haircloth and canvas, is needle-molded into proper shape and placed in each garment by tailors who do absolutely nothing else but the hand work around the shoulders and collar.

The result is a beautifully concaved shoulder and unbreakable front that no tailor can improve on at any cost.

Sovereign Brand Suits, sizes 34 to 44, $12.00, $14.00, $16.00, $18.00, $20.00.

Peerless Suits, - $6.50 to $12.00.
Princely Suits, - $8.00 to $15.00.

Cured Forty Consumptives

The Post-Graduate Hospital of New York reports that more than forty cases of consumption were cured by that institution alone during the year 1904. Many of these cases were treated at the homes of the patients. This proves conclusively that consumption can be cured and cured at home. Not every one can go to Colorado or spend weeks or months in a hospital, neither of which is necessary, but everybody can get Scott's Emulsion, and that IS necessary. It has been proved that pure, fresh air, light exercise, nourishing food and will come pretty near curing any case of consumption if there is anything to build on. Thousands of people have been restored to health by Scott's Emulsion alone. The advantages of Scott's Emulsion over the plain oil are shown in the ease with which Scott's Emulsion is accepted and retained by the stomach; the quickness with which it passes into the system; its almost immediate benefit to the affected organs, and its absolute uniformity of quality and purity.
