"Don't you, Marsh: Well, Ive got that one more surprise in store for you, but I'll keep it to myself a while longer before I spring it on you."

He was thinking of Joe Montgomery's story. If Langham did not prove quite tractable, that should be the final weapon with which he would beat him into subwith which he would beat him into submission. Presently he said:

"I've all along had my own theory about old man McBride's murder, and now I'm going to see what you think of it, Marsh."

An icy hand seemed to be clutching at Langham's heart. Glimore's cruel smiling eyes noted his suffering. He laughed.

"Of course, I don't think North killed McBride—not for one minute I don't; in fact, it's a dead moral certainty he didn't." He leaned forward in his chair and looked into his companion's eyes.

For an instant Langham met his glance.

Several Restrictions.

Although the temperance policy was not estiled, the amendments which the Government will place on the statute book are pretty well known to include the shortening of the sale in hotels by keeping bars closed until 8 o'clock in the morning, the restriction.

"I want you to let me have two thoudidn't." He leaned forward in his chair and looked into his companion's eyes. For an instant Langham met his glance without flinching, and then his eyes shifted and sought the floor. "I'll bet," said Gilmore's cool voice, "I'll bet, you what you like I could put my hand on the man who did the murder!" and as he spoke he reached out and by an apparently accidental gesture, rested his hand on Langham's shoulder, "You wouldn't like to risk any money on that little bet, eh. This eyes never left Langham's face.

Presently he took the cigar from between his strong, even teeth. "Now, I'm going to give you my theory," he said, "I want to see what you think of it—but remember always, I believe in letting well enough alone! They've got North eaged in one of those nice new cells down at the iail, and that suits me all right. My theory is that the man who fall men to fice—understand, he didn't go there with any fixed purpose of ikilling him—his ideas had not earried.

there with any fixed purpose of im—his ideas had not carried on the floor, and a dry sob burst from his killing him—his ideas had not carried him that far; he was willing to borr with the money if the old man would lend it to him. He probably needed quite a sum, say two or three thousand dollars, and the need was urgent, you must keep that in mind, and then you'll see perfectly how it all happened. Possibly my man was of the sort who don't fancy disagreeable interviews and had put off agreeable interviews and had put off going to the store until the last moment,

"Well, I guess they talked quite a while there at the back of the store, McBride standing in the doorway of the office all the time. At last it got to my man that he wasn't to have the money. But there was trouble ahead of him if he didn't get to and he wouldn't give up; he kept on as trouble and and he wouldn't give up; he kept on aking promises—urging his need—and

He did not speak at once even when the on Langham's brow, his hair was damp and clammy. He was living that unand clammy. He was living that unspeakable moment over again, with all its madness and horror. He saw himself as he walked scowling toward the front of the store; he had paused irresolutely with his hand on the door knob and then had turned back. The old merchant was standing close by the scales, a tall, gaunt figure in the waning light of day.

"Why do you tell me you can't do it?" he had demanded with dull anger, "You have the money, I know that!"

"I didn't tell you I couldn't do it, Mr. Langham, I merely intimated that I wouldn't." the old man had rejoined dryly.

ful—and skipped by the side door and out over the shed roof and down the alley, just as Joe said."

Gilmore paused and flicked away a bit of cigar ash that had lodged in a crease of his coat.

"That's the whole story of the McBride murder. Now, what do you think of my theorizing, Marsh; how does it strike you?"

was trouble ahead of him it he didn't get it, and he wouldn't give up; he kept on making promises—urging his need—and his willingness and ability to meet his obligations. He was like a starving man in the presence of food, for he knew Mc-Bride had the money in his safe and the safe door was open. His need seemed the only need in the world, and it came to him that since McBride would not lend him the money he wanted, why not take it from him anyhow? He couldn't see consequences, he could only realize that he must have two or three thousand dollars. Perhaps he got a glimmer of reason just here, and if he did he was pretty badly him a ways down the store, explaining why they couldn't do business."

Gilmore paused. His cigar had gone to take his eyes from Langham's face.

CONSERVATIVE CAUCUS NOT ON TEMPERANCE

Under Discussion at Yesterday's Conference.

Toronto, March 29. — The Toronto World (Conservative) says: The caucus of the Conservative members of the Legislature yesterday afternoon, contrary to general expectation, did not deal with the temperance problem. Although the impression had gone abroad among the Government supporters that this conference would be in the nature of a discussion which would finally settle the matter of the liquor license amend-ments, the hour of assembly fell so late in the day, and the members were so tardy in appearance that it was meeting. necessarily postponed for consideratien in the early part of next week.

MONTREAL HARD HIT

Damage Done by Sleet Estimated at Half-Million.

Montreal, Que., March 28 .- Montreal, which was cut off from the outside world for twenty-four hours by a sleetstorm, is beginning to get in touch with the world again, and also to count the cost of the storm. It is estimated that the damage caused on the Island of Montreal will exceed half a million dollars. One man was killed, and several horses fell victims of live wires, which dropped in all directions. Telephone, telegraph and light poles, as well as trees, fell like ninepins under the weight of sleet and ice which incrusted everything. The Bell Telephone Company had 137 out of its 150 long-distance lines out of order, while both C. P. R. and G. N. W. Telegraph Companies were cause labor, emboldened by success out of business. Over 1,200 telephones two-thirds of the city was in darkness last night. Trees in parks, orchards, and gardens suffered most, the heavy ice breaking them down by hundreds.

> Mr. A. W. White at a meeting of the board of trade Friday evening read a notice of motion to the effect that a committee of members be appointed to interview the city council, to see if some arrangements cannot be made whereby the board would be given rooms in the new city hall, and that a joint officer be appointed to act as publicity commissioner and secre-tary of the board of trade. The motion will be dealt with at the next

Among the communications read at the meeting was one from the sec-retary of the Hamilton board of trade asking that the London board discuss the inspection of bituminous coal coming into this country from the United States. He claimed that under the present arrangements it is held up at bonding points until it is inspected to determine whether it is slack or lump coal, thus causing congestion and delay at terminals. He advocated the appointment by the Dominion Government, of inspectors at the various points of entry, thus facilitating the handling of the cars. The matter was referred to the council.

Communications were also read from number of the shippers of this city centaining information as to delays in transporting their products by the railways. Information of this kind is being collected by the Associated Boards of Trade, by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and others to be presented to the board of railway commissioners in an effort to secure reciprocal demurrage. Mr. U. A. Buchner brought up the question of securing greater uniformity in the bankruptcy laws of the diferent provinces. At present, he stated, there is a great diversity between them, and the clauses coming under the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government. He had been impressed, he said, by the success of the insurance men in securing uniform legislation in practically every province but Queec, and deemed advisable the appointment of a committee to go into the question and memorialize other boards of trade to communicate with the premiers of their respective provinces regarding the matter. The premiers, according to custom, would meet in Ottawa next June, he stated, and if parliament were still sitting a more by them. No action was taken in the matter, as it was pointed out that the Associated Boards of Trade have the matter under advisement at the pres-

WHEN A MAN MAY STEAL

Thirst a Legitimate Reason Says the Australian Archbishop.

Sydney, N. S. W., March 28 .- Arch-Michael Kelly the Roman Catholic Primate of Australia in an address today to the Hibernian Society laid down a rule as to when a man may steal legitimately. He said: "When a man is starving and his tengue is hanging out with thirst he may rifle another man's pocket." Referring to the recent strike and the threatened new troubles the archsishop said:

"The strife between capital and labor may develop into revolution any day because capital is heartless and has rendered labor desperate and beattending violence, has placed society in a very perilous and very dangerous condition.

MINISTERS PROTEST AGAINST RAFFLES

Chatham Mayor Had Given His Sanction to Those Held at Kirmess.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Chatham, March 28. — During the Kirmess which was held this week in the armories in aid of the Kent Children's Shelter, raffles have been held in an effort to raise money for the charity. The Chatham Ministerial Association, through its president, Rev. J. R. VanWyck, protested to the chief of police and asked him to stop it. He, however, found out that the mayor had given his consent, and he raffling was therefore legalized for the Kirmess.

The protest had to be dropped, but ne association met this afternoon and nanimously passed the following resolution:

this association rejoices in he fact that the ladies of Chatham have shown such a deep interest in the welfare of the Children's Shelter, ut regrets that some methods have been used that do not meet the approval of many people of this city. We hope that in future efforts for charitable purposes the introduction of the purchase of a chance and like methods may be eliminated."

The Kirmess is very successful, and nearly every prominent - woman in the city is interested in it. The action parliament were still sitting a more of the Ministerial Association is there-uniform legislation might be obtained fore the common topic of conversation.
