

The Canadian dollar improved Canada's position after 1976, and, on an exchange-rate-adjusted basis, domestic farmers were cost-competitive until 1980. In 1984, however, total unit costs for Canadian producers still remained 22 per cent above U.S. levels.