

enthusiastic spectator, finally succumbed to the malignancy of a cancerous growth which still baffles medical science. But for that, he could have anticipated more good years of reflection and recapitulation which all of us would so dearly have wished for him. Although science could not add to his life, we who knew him can and shall give him a perennial place in our hearts and memories.