

—opposed to the low feeding or starving of animal suffering from disease or accident. The diseases and treatment of each animal are considered under their simplest and best known names, and in alphabetical order, thereby affording to every one a work of practical usefulness and convenience of reference. The articles on "Useful Hints on Feeding, and the Humane Management of Horses," "Coup de Soleil, or Sunstroke," "Frost Bites," and "Typhosus," among others, will be found of special interest to amateurs, farmers, and stock-breeders, in various parts of the country.

The advantage afforded the public in the low price of the work cannot fail to make it extensively useful in pointing out a safe and highly successful system. It is designed for a text book, presents much information contained in no other similar work, and wherever consulted, will awaken men to the many injurious teachings of old authors in new dresses.

The author desires in this connection to express his acknowledgements to X. A. Willard, A.M., and Hon. William I. Skinner, of Little Falls, N. Y.; and to Sylvester J. Megargee, Esq., of Philadelphia. Also, to S. J. Sharpless, William Massey, and Samuel Huston, Esqs., importers and extensive breeders of valuable stock, and to Dr. Norris, of Halifax, Nova Scotia,
