

CHAPTER XIII.

PROXIMATE CAUSE.

Meaning of—Statement of law—Difficulties connected with subject—View of the philosophers—Definition of proximate cause—Definition of remote cause—Application of law to municipal cases—Classification of the authorities—Need not be sole cause—Authorities—Need not be event next preceding the damage—Illustrations—Authorities—May immediately precede the damage—Illustrations—Authorities—Concurring causes—Effect of—Statement of the law as to application to municipal cases—Intervening causes—When they affect the result—Doctrine of reasonable anticipation—The American view—Authorities—The English and Canadian view—Difference between it and the American view—Authorities—Illustrations—Remote cause—Meaning of—Authorities and illustrations—Two forms of defect—Which one must be clearly established.

CHAPTER XIV.

CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

The general rule stated—Degree of contributory negligence—Who last could have prevented the accident in case of a defective highway—Persons incapable of contributory negligence—Children of tender years—Authorities—Negligence of parent or guardian of child—Authorities—Doctrine of identification—How applied to accidents on the highway—Functions of judge and jury—Shifting of onus of proof—Actions tried without a jury—Plaintiff's knowledge of defect or danger—Degree of care required—Review of the authorities—Negligence when plaintiff ignorant of the danger—Question of fact—Many illustrations—Degree of care required by infirm persons—Defective vision—Total blindness—The deaf—Paralytic—Intoxication—Authorities—Plaintiff's conduct in an emergency—When to be deemed negligent—Violation of statute or by-law—When it amounts to negligence—When not—Authorities.

CHAPTER XV.

REMEDY OVER.

Statutory provisions in Ontario—The same in Manitoba with one exception—Statute in British Columbia—No remedy over at common law—Actions for protection of the highway—Two classes of cases when remedy over allowed—Obstructions and excavations—