

James Nolan, the city hall patrolman, died suddenly at his home, 46 Sumach-street, yesterday. Mr. Nolan had been on duty at the foot of the main staircase since the city hall was first opened, in 1899. For some time he had been suffering from rheumatism. On Saturday, however, he was at his post as usual, but on Sunday he complained of not feeling well. Early yesterday morning he announced his intention of going to work as usual, and a few minutes later he was dead. Mr. Nolan was very popular around the city hall, and the civic officials and employes are deeply grieved at his
