Mining Market Strengthening On Anticipated Advancement ON SILVER EXPEDITION

Cobalt Shares Are Particularly Popular Many Brokers Finding it Celebrated Guide and Prospector Difficult to Fill Buying Orders.

Friday Evening, Jan. 8. Both of the local mining exchanges to-day had what might be termed an excellent undertone. Considerable buying power was in the market from investors in Eastern. Canada and in the States, and the main selling came from local operators who have had to relieve themselves of some of their holdings on account of difficulties met in financing their obligations.

Foster, Peterson Lake, Silver Leaf, Rochester and Silver Bar contributed most of to-day's business. A shipment of two cars of ore by Foster this week has had considerable influence on the in regard to this stock and has made a new demand for the shares

GOOD MEN BACK SAVILLE

Tells of Equipment Necessary for Winter Prospecting.

A sincere and genuine interest is defew days in charge of Thomas Saville undertake for the silverland to the west of Lake

Mr. Saville, as is now generally known, is one of the most competent guides and prospectors in the whole north country. For seven years he has lived among the Indians of the north, and has learned their traditions their and has learned their traditions, their

Six years ago Mr. Saville knew of the silver deposits at Maple Mountain, long before they became known to the outside world. Several years ago he knew of the existence of silver deposits in other parts of the north country, which have since been staked and developed. Since his knowledge of mineralogical conditions expanded Mr. Saville has doubtless (a) ville has doubtless felt a certain degree of regret that he didn't take advantage of the knowledge that same to him at that time, so exclusively and in such

But Saville claims still to possess the greatest secret of them all. He learned from his Indian friends some time ago of the existence of silver deposits in the who are associated with him in this enterprise know the exact location, and he has simply divulged enough to set them right in locating their base of supplies, and in building their cabins pedition which they have in contem-that we are starting out. Now, the first thing I think of is blankets. I have seen some blankets, but none to equal the rabbitskin of the Indian country. I can truthfully say I never saw an Indian starting out on a trip without it after about Dec. 1

The backed up by cold abrupt figures that told the story in a nutshell.

While it was an advertisement and must be taken as such, yet it is a fact and one not to be Ignored—that Cobalt stream of the camps of longer life is marvelous.

beaver and a good pair of woolen mits with a pair of buckskin mits to wear over them."
In figuring on his outfit for this expedition Mr. Saville works it out or the basis of the following list, which is suffcient material for two prospectors going into the bush: Ten pounds long clear pork, two slabs of breakfast bacon; ten pounds of beans; ten pounds of oatmeal or corn meal; one three-pound pail of lard; one pound of small sack salt; pepper shaker; ten pounds of prunes; one can of desicat-able; a toque for wearing at night. A piece of moose skin for mending purposes is very handy.

This list represents about what two prospectors would carry in equipping themselves for a prospecting expedition in the north country in the win-

M. W. Cunliffe's engineering works at Rossland were burned at a loss of $10,000.

"We will suppose you have your outfit now ready for loading." he said. "Spread the tarpaulin over the toboggan floor. Your heavy stuff should well to the front. Keep the lunch stuff, tea pails, etc., on the back so that at noon you just have to untie a small part to get at these. While traveling do not drink water on the trail, as it is weakening. If very thirsty spend about fifteen minutes and make a little tea.

"When about to camp look for a sheltered spot on the south side or behind a point, if on a lake. Take off snowshoes and use these as shovels. Scrape out about seven or eight feet of snow and cut seven or eight poles and drive them into the space. and drive them into the snow at an angle or 45 degrees.
